2 Things New; Yes, 3
An Onion Worker's Family
Can't Shoot Santa Claus
Bless the Ozone Belt

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Daily, every newspaper should answer the question:

"What's new?"

At Tampa, Fla., Ramon Perez, cigar maker, out of work, decided to die, took off his clothes, jumped naked into a colony of hornets, the sort that boys call yellow jackets. It was too late when his mother and the fire department arrived. He died, "every part of his body swelled to more than twice its normal size." That is new.

If in boyhood you have poked a hornet's nest with a long pole, or later ridden through a field of hornets' nests in California (this writer has done both), you can think of pleasanter ways of suicide.

Theodore Dreiser, able writer, celebrating his 63rd birthday yesterday, said life is still interesting, but when it bores him he will leave. Asked, "Do you mean suicide?" he replied, "Of course, why not. If I ever find life uninteresting, why stick around?"

That is new, for this age. In past ages suicide was generally approved, and very respectable. One very old Greek philosopher, who stumbled leaving his classroom, killed himself, disgusted. "Falling on your sword," once was all the fashion. It has died out. Now, with Daniel Webster, men say "suicide is confession," confession of guilt, cowardice, or something else unpleasant.

Mr. Dreiser will never commit suicide, for he will always find something interesting to do, and do it well. May he live 63 years more.

A New York firm making pocketbooks felt it couldn't afford NRA wages and working conditions in New York, moved its plant to Greenfield, Mass., where NRA conditions are less expensive.

The regional labor board tells the firm:

"Run away employers must be prevented from escaping their obligations to national recovery by removing to a community where they can pay a lower wage."

That also is new in American industry. Such a rule could have forbidden Pullman to build his town, the Steel company to build Gary, Ind., or Ford to create Dearborn.

You read about the "onion workers'" strike in Ohio: Strikers alleged to have bombed the home of the mayor, citizens rising against strikers, beating their leader, ordering him to leave town.

All this for the majority is far away news, but when you see a photograph of a striker and his family, sitting outside one of the miserable hovels from which strikers are evicted, the thing becomes real.

The man, young, looks old, his young wife looks older than he. Their eight children, five so small that they are held in the laps of the father and mother, or older brothers and sisters, are thin, rickety, barefooted, miserably dressed, underfed.

You hate to think of anything like "an attack on vested interests," but if there are many families of that sort, living in hovels with leaky roofs, with not enough to eat, no decent clothes to wear, the father and older children working for 8 or 10 cents an hour, to support a family of 10, you hope the strikers will win and that the "New Deal," if necessary, will help them.

The "American Liberty League," organized to protect the beautiful old American dollar and "vested interests" from the "New Deal," expects former Governor Al. Smith to help.

Mr. John W. Davis, who also ran for President on the Democratic ticket, is said to be with the league "heart and soul."

Former Governor Smith's friends think he may be "too busy."

The probability of beating President Roosevelt's party this fall was expressed well by a former Democratic cabinet member who is not a Roosevelt man:

"You can't shoot Santa Claus, you know, especially around Christmas."

This administration is, for tens of millions of Americans and hundreds of American cities, the greatest "Santa Claus" in all history.

In Chicago, thanks to President Roosevelt, 14,000 public school teachers, and 4000 civil

MILL RIOTING PLAN BARED BY POLICE

Developments today in the impending textile general strike were:

1—Threats of Communist plots to "steal" the strike from labor officials were unearthed by Boston police, who lay out lines to combat disturbances.

2—Charge by Francis J. Gorman, strike committee chairman, that manufacturers plan use of tear gas and machine guns.

3—Mediation move set for tomorrow meets with rebuff, but hope expressed for presidential intervention.

4—New England textile centers await order to strike, with a possibility that it may come before the planned date, Saturday.

Threats of Communist plots, tear gas, machine guns and other disturbing factors rose today on the eve of the impending textile general strike to worry those leaders on both sides who would avoid bloodshed.

With the nation-wide strike scheduled for next Saturday, revelation came today through Boston police that a Communist plot to

MOTHER LOVE KILLER BEGS FOR DEATH

Concord, N. H., Aug. 28—County Solicitor Willoughby A. Colby said today that Mrs. Lois M. Cotter, alleged mercy-slayer of her crippled daughter, would be charged with second degree murder, which carries a maximum penalty of life imprisonment. He ordered police to arrest her when she is ready to leave the hospital.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 28—"Please let me die!"

Fate denied that plea of Mrs. Lois M. Cotter, 27, today and throughout New Hampshire aroused public sympathy and unemotional law came into dramatic conflict over another "mercy slaying."

Yesterday—with death—Mrs. Cotter ended the suffering of the helplessly crippled daughter she devotedly nursed through ten years of agony with a mother love that commanded the admiration of the community.

TRIED TO DIE

With the child, Marjorie, whose life was but a hopeless existence, the mother tried to die, and failed.

The child, whose suffering came to an end in a gas-filled house, awaited burial, released from pain.

The mother, recovering, awaited the outcome of the clash between public sympathy and a law that recognizes no justification for violation of the Fifth Commandment.

On a screened cot in the Pillsbury Hospital, Mrs. Cotter begged to be allowed to die and was told that she would recover from the

Sick Man Escapes, Epidemic Feared

Northampton, Aug. 28—Fearing that his freedom may cause a renewal of the dysentery epidemic, a search is being made here today for Ernest Chabot, an attendant at the Northampton State Hospital, missing from the hospital, where he has been quarantined.

Chabot, who was nearly recovered from his dysentery illness, disappeared from the hospital grounds last night, after being allowed out for a smoke. It is feared he will renew the epidemic by contacting others.

Train Wrecked by Washout; 2 Killed

Greenville, S. C., Aug. 28—Two men were killed and three injured when a freight train on a branch of the Southern Railroad was wrecked by a washout at Piedmont near here today. The firemen and another member of the train crew were trapped when the engine plunged deep into the mud. Rescue workers said it would take several hours to recover their bodies.

WIND LIGHT FOR YACHT TEST

By Associated Press

Newport, R. I., Aug. 82—A strong breeze still was lacking today, as the America's Cup committee ordered the two remaining contenders for the defense berth, Rainbow and Yankee, out for another test.

The wind was light and from the southwest.

A 30-mile windward-leeward course was ordered for the day's race. The breeze had swung around to the south as race time neared, and increased to about nine knots.

PLANES, BOATS HUNT BODY OFF SCITUATE

Lieutenant Maurice J. Connell, 45, of 38 Robeson street, Jamaica Plain, an army reserve pilot with 15 years' flying experience, was killed today when his observation plane crashed into the ocean 200 yards off Fourth Cliff, Scituate.

Lieutenant Connell was flying from the army air corps training camp at Marston Mills, Cape Cod, to the Boston airport when his plane plunged into the fog-shrouded water.

Coast guard surf boats dashed to the rescue but were too late.

Radio operators had heard the roar of the plane's engine and then heard it crash off shore.

LOG IS FOUND

Surf boats, from the Scituate and Brant Rock stations, under Chief Boatswain's Mate Donald S. Bangs, searched the area for several hours, but succeeded in finding only one wheel and the log of the wrecked plane.

The coast guardsmen continued dragging for the plane and Lieutenant Connell's body while planes from the Army Air Corps training camp and National Guard planes from East Boston circled overhead in an effort to locate the sunken wreckage.

According to Captain Glenn Salisbury, commandant of the Army Air Corps here, Lieutenant Connell was flying on a photographic mission. He was on his way to the East Boston Airport to pick up a photographer before continuing his flight to New Hampshire.

NO CHANCE TO LEAP

He was flying a Curtis-Falcon observation plane and was equipped with a parachute, but apparently had no opportunity to leap for his life.

Army air officials, reconstructing the crash, said they believed Lieutenant Connell waas flying very low over the ocean to keep under the heavy fog. It is believed the plane's undercarriage struck the water first and sent the craft plummeting to the bottom.

Word of the tragedy was relayed to Lieutenant Connell's sister, Mrs. Gertrude Wilkinson, who has made her home with the pilot and his wife.

WIFE ON VACATION

Mrs. Connell is vacationing in the northern part of the state. Her sister-in-law left immediately to notify Mrs. Connell of her husband's death.

Twice within an hour and a half in the summer of 1928 he escaped injury when two planes he was piloting at the dedication of the Amesbury airport crashed into trees because of motor trouble.

During the way he enlisted in the air service and was sent to the Princeton University School of Aeronautics from which he was graduated on July 13, 1918. He was graduated from the army primary flying school at Souther Field, Americus, Ga., on November 6, 1918, and took a course in piloting pursuit planes at Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.

15 YEARS IN AIR

Following his discharge from war service in 1919, he returned to the air service as a member of the Reserve Flying Corp.

He had a total of 15 years' service in the Army Air Corps and reserve and during that time he had flown tevery type of army airplane.

In civilian life, Lieutenant Connell was a clerk at the Back Bay postoffice. He had been employed there for more than 17 years.

JOHNSON'S PAY RAISED $9000

London Motors Silent Now

By International News Service

London, Aug. 28—London awoke today after the first night of the great silence. By order of the Minister of Transport no horns sounded, and no noisy exhausts rended the night by explosions. The experiment was voted a success by authorities. Motorists and pedestrians were not so sure.

The city seemed strangely subdued as drivers "felt" their way past crossings by switching headlights on and off instead of sounding horns.

Traffic was slowed down 30 per cent and most pedestrians appeared fearful to risk crossing, despite the mobilization of 3,000 extra police. The experiment will be continued for a week.

SEARCHERS SOAR OVER NANTUCKET IN BANDIT HUNT

SECRET OCEAN HIDEOUT NOW SOUGHT

In firm belief that some secret anchorage off Nantucket is the hiding place of the bandits, who looted a $427,000 payroll in Brooklyn, N. Y., last week, Massachusetts authorities took to the air today.

They hoped to find a boat that held the robbers. Finding of a bank money bag in Duxbury had confirmed previous suspicions that the getaway had been by sea and the hideaway was off Massachusetts, as revealed exclusively by the Boston Evening American.

All through the night an aviator, with a state police investigator aboard, waited off Nantucket to continue the air search. This morning the hunt again went on.

BAG HELD AS CLUE

Meanwhile state police and Duxbury officials were waiting arrival of New York detectives, holding for them the empty money bag recovered on the Ellison estate in Powder Point yesterday.

The bag, soiled and worn, bore the words in stencilling: "Return to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York." William Mosher, an employe on the estate, found it in a gutter in front of the Eben H. Ellison summer home.

The hunt about Nantucket was renewed with intensity when word got to state police that some suspicious looking men aboard a boat were trying to charter an airplane. Corporal Robert Jones and Trooper John Bardsley relayed the clue to the mainland.

SURVEYS ALL CRAFT

Lieutenant Parker W. Gray then took to the air with an aviator surveying all boats in sight and hunting for craft that were foreign to those parts.

Police would not discuss what progress they had made in their search from the skies, but there was one report that surveillance had narrowed to two suspect craft.

SPEEDBOAT STUDIED

In New York, police searched for secret identifying marks on a speedboat found submerged off Long Island Saturday, and at the same time, from Camp Smith, Peekskill, theft of a machine gun and 30 carrier pigeons over the week-end was reported.

Theft of the machine gun and pigeons was believed the work of a gang in hiding and possibly in need of some means of communication.

The fact that detectives have been looking among former smugglers for a link to the holdup gave significance to the finding of the money bag in Massachusetts, since Duxbury beach formerly was a landing place for rum-runners.

City Is Studying Ban on Outsiders

On a request from the city council, an investigation was underway today by Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley to decide whether the council has the legal right to bar non-residents of Boston from city payrolls.

City Councillor James F. Finley of West Roxbury, sponsor of the request, said that since Boston residents are prohibited from working in neighboring municipalities, Boston should protect itself.

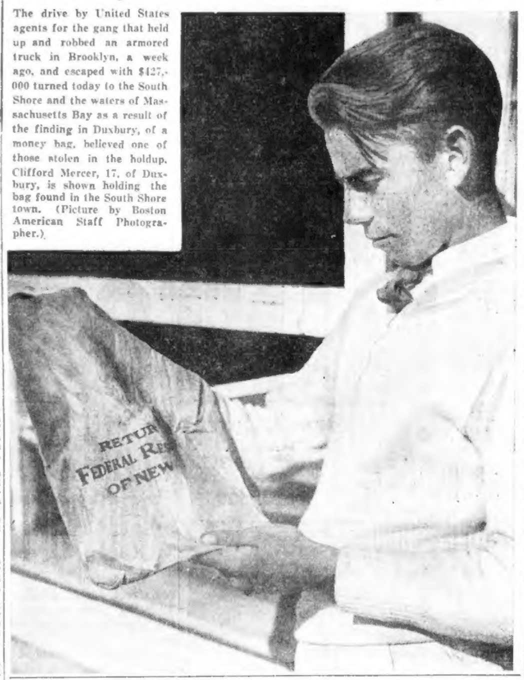
Cash Bag Turns Bandit Hunt to Cape Cod



The drive by United States agents for the gang that held up and robbed an armored truck in Brooklyn, a week ago, and escaped with $427,000 turned today to the South Shore and the waters of Massachusetts Bay as a result of the finding in Duxbury, of a money bag, believed one of those stolen in the holdup. Clifford Mercer, 17, of Duxbury, is shown holding the bag found in the South Shore town. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

MRS. EBELL TO FACE COURT

the inquest, Attorney Lawrence P. McHugh, counsel for Mrs. Helen Castle Ebell of Brookline, Mass., went into court today to fight for her freedom.

Before Justice Oscar E. Church in Montville, a justice of the peace court, Mrs. Ebell and Louis Goldsmith of Roxbury, Mass., were scheduled for arraignment this afternoon, Goldsmith charged with the death of her husband and Mrs. Ebell charged with being an accessory.

DIED OF PUSH

Ebell died on August 18 after allegedly being pushed from the running board of Goldsmith's car in a quarrel over the 8-year-old Ebell daughter, Helen.

Just before the court session, Attorney McHugh of Boston declared he would ask that the coroner's report be thrown out as inadmissible because not consistent with the evidence.

None of the witnesses, he reminded, had accused Mrs. Ebell of striking her husband, and none had disputed her story that she was taking the little girl for treatment by a doctor when her divorced husband objected and started the battle.

Both Mrs. Ebell and Goldsmith faced kidnap charges also, but Attorney McHugh said that an exhaustive search of statutes and cited precedents for this peculiar case had failed to unearth one, with the exception of one reference under Canadian law—a case in Ottawa.

Mrs. Agnes Castle of Brookline, mother of Mrs. Ebell, was also on hand today, hoping that her daughter's bail of $10,000 might be reduced to a figure where the mother could release her.

PLAYED IN CONCERT

Mrs. Ebell, it was learned today, was once a protege of Mrs. Jack Gardner, who took a keen interest in the then Helen Castle's piano studies.

The girl studied at one time under Dr. Karl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and at 13 played a concert at the New England Conservatory of Music.

"Oh, my poor baby," she moaned

What charge, if any, will be lodged against her depends upon the police, the county prosecutor's office and possibly a grand jury.

NOTE HELD SECRET

Officials declined to disclose the contents of her "farewell" note, found in the kitchen of the Cotter home in Perley street where the pitiable little body of the crippled child was found lifeless beside the unconscious mother.

Public sympathy was born in the shocked community, which for a decade watched her devotion to the helpless child whose life she finally ended.

Mrs. Cotter, 11 years ago, became the high school girl bride of Lawrence E. Cotter, now an electrician at the New Hampshire State Hospital.

Marjorie, her tiny limbs crippled at birth, came into a life of suffering a year later.

The child never walked. Nor could she use her arms. And she could mutter, painfully, only a few words. She had to be bathed and dressed and carried about and undressed, and in her world of hopelessness, she was as inanimate as the furniture of her room except that her heart kept beating and her dark eyes moved, envying the movement of other living things.

All that had to be done for Marjorie, her mother did, according to her neighbors. For the first years there was hope in her devotion—hope that this little girl might get better and be as other children. Hope died, when doctor after doctor could not help, but mother love, in pity, seemed to grow stronger.

Another daughter, Marion, now Cotter home—the little girl who in every way. She romped and played, grew as children should, and started school.

For the last eight years there was that tragic contrast in the Cotter home—the little girl who ran and laughed and played—the little girl, older but smaller, who did not move at all, who only stared.

So the plight of Marjorie became, in ever-present contrast with the life of her younger sister, a more sharply vivid thing to prey upon the mind of the woman who was mother to both.

MOTHER SUFFERED

This, neighbors believe, forced her finally to do what yesterday was done. They never, they said, heard her complain nor give any indication of the torment of mind they knew she was suffering.

Mrs. Jeremiah Cotter, mother-in-law of the alleged mercy slayer, said:

"I did not know that she was in such a desperate frame of mind. I had no idea that she was in despair and had given up hope. I still believe it must be an accident. She has been so brave and so patient that it doesn't seem that she would give up like that."

County Solicitor Willoughly A. Colby said:

"Such cases as this are unfortunate, but the law is plain. Mrs. Cotter left a suicide note which made her intention clear. If she had been discovered two minutes later the case would have been closed."

This is the time of the year to make that change that you have desired so long. You will find the choicest apartments, homes and rooms listed today and every day in the Rental columns of the American and Advertiser.

MANY HURT IN NIAGARA RIOT

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 28—Fear of a new outbreak between whites and Negoes kept police on guard today after a night of rioting.

More than 3000 joined in a free-for-all battle which resulted in serious injury to three persons and minor hurts to many others. Intense feeling after the fighting had been subdued led to intermittent clashes during the night.

The trouble started when an attempt was made to break up a meeting of the International Labor Defense, called to rally workers to the defense of Alphonse Davis, Negro, who had been arrested on a charge of attacking a white girl. Several shots were fired, none taking effect, police said.

Windows in stores and homes in the district were smashed as the angry crowd battled back and forth.

Girl Sailor Quits Jail

Hitch-Hiking Lass Spent Over Three Months in Cell

Worcester, Aug. 28—The old ditty—"she was just a sailor's sweetheart" turned out to be a sad song for a young California girl, who hitch-hiked across the continent in search of her sailor-boy friend.

Rose Marie Turner, of Long Beach, Cal., is at liberty today, folowing her release from jail, where she has been held since last May on a charge of vagrancy.

The sailor lad is also very much at liberty since he declined to accept the idea of marrying Rose, after the local court here had finally located him in Newport, R. I.

Rose's case was placed on trial after Sheriff H. Oscar Rocheleau told Judge Burns of Superior criminal court that her father had been found, and had offered to pay his daughter's fare home.

Rose was arrested here on May 9, when she was discovered asleep, with a girl companion, in a motor truck bound for Providence, R. I.

NATION'S EYES ON LEFT RACE IN FAR WEST

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 28—Primary elections are being held in three states today, California, Mississippi and South Carolina, and the results may provide a partial answer to the question the politicians have been asking themselves of late, to wit: "How far left?"

Oddly enough, it is the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in California that rivets most political attention in Washington.

This nomination has not been worth much for a good many years. But this year the Democratic registration exceeds the Republican in California for the first time in three decades, and in the 73d Congress the Democrats have a majority of the state delegation, 11 to 9. So there is something at stake.

Into this idyllic Democratic picture crashed Upton Sinclair, Socialist, radical, fiery crusader for unpopular causes. Despairing of ever accomplishing anything through the Socialist party, Sinclair plopped over into the Democratic party with the advent of the New Deal and announced himself for Governor.

If the frantic messages reaching Washington from old-line Democrats in California tell the story, Sinclair has a good chance of winning in a field of eight, which includes, among others, George Creel, chief of wartime propaganda in the Wilson administration.

Old-line Democrats in California appealed to President Roosevelt in vain to take some hand in the situation, to say some word, or write some letter calculated to diminish Sinclair's chances. Mr. Roosevelt refused.

Postmaster-General James A. Farley, who still clings to the national chairmanship while other public officials are giving up their political berths, feels somewhat differently about it, however.

He has listened sympathetically to the pleas of the organization stalwarts in California, that if Sinclair is nominated he will drag the whole Democratic ticket down to defeat with him in November—including the 11 congressmen.

For the senatorial nomination, Senator Hiram Johnson seems assured of getting the endorsement of all parties. He was the one Republican Senator who bolted Hoover in '32 that the Roosevelt administration openly endorsed.

Mississippi's three-cornered senatorial race also offers considerable political interest.

Boston Clubman Faces Reno Suit

Charging extreme cruelty, Mrs. Bernice Taylor Powers of Fairfield County, Ct., has filed a Reno divorce suit against her husband, Ralph Averill Powers, Brookline and Boston clubman.

The couple, married in New Orleans in 1915, formerly lived at Kent street, Brookline. They have three children.

By Associated Press

Collander, Ont., Aug. 28—The Dionne quintuplets are three months old today, but it is just another day in the lives of the famous little sisters.

Instead of birthday cake, the babies had their usual three ounces of milk every three hours, a bit of tomato juice and the oxygen they receive every day.

No celebration took place in the little farm home, where 24-year-old Mrs. Olivia Dionne gave birth to the five—Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie—early the morning of May 28.

The first real celebration since the babies came will take place in a few weeks, when the hospital built especially for them will be opened a 100 yards down the road from the Dionne home.

The babies are taken out of their beds and incubators daily for a 15-minute stretching period in the sun with most of their clothes off. They usually show appreciation of this freedom with kicks and gurgles.

They weighed an aggregate of 29 pounds 8¼ ounces yesterday, almost triple the first accurate weights taken a week after birth. Then they scaled 10 pounds 1¼ ounces.

CONNECTICUT'S G. O. P. VOTES

By Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 28—Keyed up by the first wide-open battle for the gubernatorial nomination in many years, Connecticut Republicans choose today at state-wide caucuses the delegates to the party's state convention in Hartford September 11 and 12.

Rivals for the nomination are Lieutenant-Governor Roy C. Wilcox; State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn of Hartford County, and Albert E. Lavery, former president pro tempore of the State Senate and now president of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce.

United States Senator Frederic C. Walcott is expected to be renominated without opposition.

Connecticut will elect a senator, a governor, six representatives to Congress, the Legislature and other state officers in November.

Waits Verdict

Dolores Del Rio, Mexican film star, is today waiting the outcome of the trial of Caroline Decker on vagrancy charges involving the names of film celebrities in California's drive against radicals. MISS DECKER'S JURY LOCKED

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 28—A police court jury failed to return a verdict early today in the case of Caroline Decker, whose arrest on vagrancy charges involved the names of film celebrities in California's campaign against radicals. The jury was locked up to resume deliberations later in the day on her case as well as those of 15 other alleged Communists. Two were convicted, two acquitted and three others ordered released.

Authorities said they had found in Miss Decker's apartment letters mentioning the name of James Cagney as a financial contributor to Communistic efforts. He vigorously denied aiding Communists or other radicals in any way.

So did three Mexican film stars whose names were found written on a slip of paper in Miss Decker's apartment. They were Lupe Velez, Ramon Navarro and Dolores Del Rio.

BRITAIN WANTS NAVAL GUNS LIMITED TO 14 INCHES

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service Inc.)

London, Aug. 28—Great Britain has started a drive to limit the maximum caliber of guns of the world's navies to 14 inches.

The largest guns on American, British and Japanese battleships are 16 inches.

Naval advocates of large ships point out that the 16-inch gun is necessary for capital ships in order that they may be able to outrange the smaller and speedier cruisers.

Britain, having failed to date to induce Italy to abandon her plan to build two capital ships of 35,000 tons, or to convince the United States that capital ships should be drastically reduced in size, is now concentrating on reducing the fighting efficiecy of three large ships.

Britain informed Italy, it was learned, that there is a possibility of inducing the United States to agree to 14-inch guns as a maximum, but that this inclination on the part of the United States would be jeopardized if Italy mounted the 16-inchers on her new fighting craft.

Italy was likewise informed that Norman H. Davis, American ambassador at large, during the London naval talks, indicated that President Roosevelt might accept a reduction of battleship displacement to 32,000 tons and of gun caliber to 15 inches, as respective maximums.

The British admiralty therefore is anxious to induce Italy to mount the smaller guns in order to have big cards in hand for her attempt to bring the United States around to her viewpoint.

DEATH TAKES HUSBAND FROM DOROTHY DILLEY'S ARMS

MUSICAL STAR DARED FLIGHT FOR REUNION

With his death, from pneumonia, another of those "most beautiful White Light romances" was definately checked off the boards after months of lingering there, causing talk.

Talk that rose to a crescendo when pretty little Miss Dilley, mother of a healthy little Louis Graveraet Kaufman, 3d, took her own life in her hands an dflew through stormy skies to the bedside of the man she had wed and for whom she had born a child and whom she had left when her career on the stage called again.

ILL SEVERAL WEEKS

Kaufman had been ill for several weeks with "a summer cold." Then pneumonia developed. When it was reported he was near death, Dorothy caught the first plane out of Newark, N. J. She reached the millionaire scion's bedside just as the attending physicians had about given up hope.

The sick man rallied.

It was believed he had passed the danger point, sustained by the presence of the beautiful little dancer, who sat beside him, encouraging him to live.

But as lowering clouds obscured the sunlight in mid-afternoon a relapse set in and the son of the socially prominent former head of the great Chatham & Phenix Bank left his line of heritage in the hands of the Broadway dancer and his son.

The "beautiful romance" had lost its beauty last October, when Dorothy Dilley went into the cast of a musical play entitled "Hot and Bothered." Young Kaufman refused comment, but Miss Dilley admitted they had reached the parting of the ways.

BUDDING ROMANCE

There was an interlude then in which young "Jimmy" Donahue, son of Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue, heiress to a large part of the Woolworth 5 and 10 millions, played with Miss Dilley on the stage and off during a time when he was supposed to be in the fashionable Choate School in Wallingford, Ct.

Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue—who had been the victim of a fabulous gem theft a number of years before—ended the theatrical career of her son by taking the name of "James Dugan" off the theater program.

'Butterfly' Flies to Dying Mate

Maine Rum Firms Are Under Probe

Portland, Me., Aug. 28—Possible federal prosecution of two Boston liquor concerns as a result of allegedly illegal shipments into Maine is under consideration, Henry P. Weaver, federal investigator in charge of the alcohol tax unit, said here.

Weaver did not name the liquor firms, but said improperly labelled shipments had been sent into the state by them. Moreover, letters from the two concerns instructing clients how to evade the federal laws had come into his possession, he added.

MISS BARTON'S SPINE HURT

By International News Service

Putnam, Conn., Aug. 28—Betsy Barton, 16, has a crushed 11th vertebra of her spine, her father, Bruce Barton, noted author, told International News eSrvice at Day-Kimball hospital here today. He said:

"She received a crushed vertebra in Sunday night's automobile accident. The vetebra was badly bruised, but not out of place. There is a temporary paralysis, but it is steadily receding and the doctors are very hopeful of her eventurl recovery.

"My wife and I are pleased with the progress Betsy is showing. She had a comfortable night and we are confident she will be all right.

"We plan to stay here indefinitely."

6 FLEE POLICE AFTER FIGHT

Dracut, Aug. 28—With clues from everywhere, but captures nowhere, the hunt for four handcuffed youths who were rescued from police spread today all over northeastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire.

The quartet, arrested as gasoline theft suspects, were wrenched from their captors by two confederates and after a bitter struggle and a sharp gun battle, the six escaped in a speedy maroon-colored car. No one was shot.

Police teletypes and radio spread the word to every section today and reports began to come in of cars having been seen that answered the description of the wanted machine. But none was captured.

Police based their hopes on detection and arrest of the escaped prisoners and their rescuers in that the handcuffs would have to be filed off, and this would call attention to them.

JURY IS TO HEAR 'LITTLE EVA'S' OWN WORDS

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN
International News Service Correspondent

Cooperstown, N. Y., Aug. 28—Eva Coo's "confession"—made in the midnight on Crumhorn mountain to the shrieking of bats and the moaning of the wind through a haunted house—was to be read today at her trial for murder, as the prosecution climaxed its battle to send her to the electric chair.

Then the state will rest.

But before "Little Eva's" own words—damning her as the money killer of limping Harry Wright—are told to the jury of farmers, high drama will stalk the packed county court room, with the defense fighting to keep Mrs. Coo's fateful statement out of the record.

District Attorney Don Grant announced that after a few minor closing witnesses he will seek to introduce, not one—but two—confessions purported to have been made by the defendant after a gruesome re-enactment of the crime atop the shadowed mountain.

CORPSE IN STAR ROLE

She broke down, the State contends, after they replayed that strange mystery of the mallet murder—replayed it with a perfect cast even to the dead man's body, dug out of its fresh grave to go through the lead role.

They took Eva up the mountain, five days after the crime, and stood her in the driveway of the haunted Scott homestead in the dark night with the bats crying and the June wind sighing through the trees.

Martha Cliff was there "to tell the truth about everything," and the car she said she used to run over Harry was standing there, its headlamps lighting the scene, falling on the twisted body of the dead hired man lying like a dummy in the dirt path.

They confronted Eva with this—and after she had looked at that lifeless thing, after she had touched it and lifted it in her big hands and felt the shuddering weight of that corpse in her arms, Eva "broke," the law contends.

MARTHA TO TESTIFY

When they finally let her come down from the mountain—away from the screaming bats and the wind and that dark dead thing that had been Harry Wright—the Diamond Lil of the hill country was ready to talk, and talk she did, according to the State.

Grant revealed that he will call Martha Clift, admitted accomplice in the murder, to substantiate the story of the confession. Martha is said to have been present while Eva was making at least one of the statements.

Meanwhile, "Little Eva's" defense planned to use every legal weapon to keep both statements from reaching the jurors.

Meanwhile the defense was shrouded in secrecy, but one thing seemed certain: Eva, to save herself from the electric chair, will try the government's own witnesses to put the blame for Wright's murder on her handsome lover, Harry Nabinger—the "kiss-and-tell" salesman who betrayed her on the stand.

Tongue Tied by Ice Cream Cone

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 28—This is the saga of a tourist abroad in New York, Samuel Millstein, who drove up from Jackson, Miss., to visit the metropolis and, incidentally, Long beach.

It was there, while he was lapping an ice cream cone, that it happened—his tongue caught in his bridgework.

He approached a policeman on the boardwalk, pointed to his mouth, and said something that sounded like "nyah, nyah." The officer hooked a finger experimentally under the tongue, and pulled. No use. So he called an ambulance.

RECOVERY PLAN CUTS WELFARE LIST HERE

Because of President Roosevelt's recovery program, no substantial increase in the number of persons receiving aid from the City of Boston is anticipated during the coming winter, John C. L. Dowling, executive director of the municipal welfare department, declared today.

At the present time there are 28,688 cases on the welfare lists, Mr. Dowling said. Of these 23,433 represent workers who are qualifed to earn their own livng if a means is provided. The remainder are old age assistance and mothers aid, persons who even in times of prosperity would have to be aided by the municipal government.

Dowling's announcement came as a result of reports from New York City that welfare lists there are steadily growing.

"During the past week 60 cases were added to our rolls but they represented families that had been taken care of through the E. R. A. and it is to be assumed that they will shortly leave our rolls again. The men were employed as laborers and returned to the welfare lists because they had been unable to save sufficient funds to provide for their families until new projects were begun," he said.

number of codes from 682 to approximately 250.

During this pruning process, NRA officials hope they will diminish the fire of criticism directed recently against the high cost of NRA code administration, a bill which the public eventually pays. They also clai mthat allied lines will receive identical treatment on common problems and that much duplication will be eliminated.

TEN DIVISIONS

The 682 codes will be divided into 22 sections, under the present program, but these sections eventually will be classified under 10 divisions, as follows:

1—Food and farm products.

2—Textiles, furs and leather.

4—Chemicals, drugs, paints, paper and rubber.

5—Equipment, machinery, tools, fixtures and vehicles.

7—Construction in all branches.

8—Public utilities, Transportation and communication.

9—Finance, graphic arts and amusements.

10—Professional, service trades; all wholesale and retail codes, except food.

The official NRA statement admitted the veracity of current charges of exorbitant costs of administration by code authorities. It said:

"Studies of code expense to industry now are being made both in the NRA and outside to reach the minimum consistent with effective administration.

SAVINGS SEEN

"Preliminary indications are that there is room for very marked overhead reduction, and the experience of the administration in watching the operation of codes indicated that marked savings to industrial result in the croupings of smaller industries into larger administrative units."

Garb Too Risque for Charity

Sisters Refuse Cash Given by Scanty Costume Ball

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 28—Money attracted to the box office of last Friday's Beaux Arts ball by bathing beauties has been spurned by one of the ball's principal beneficiaries—St. Joseph's Hospital at Far Rockaway, Queens.

The main feature of the ball, given at the Atlantic Beach Club, was a pageant, "Bathing Beauties of History," in which the Saint Joan of Arc was depicted in a bathing suit made of imitation armor, helmet, shield and metal cloth. Mary Peck portrayed the saint.

The hospital, advertised as a beneficiary, refused to accept any part of the proceeds. Sister Mary Bertrand, superintendent, explained the Catholic Church was opposed in general to bathing beauty contests. She said she had been led to believe the function would be a dinner and entertainmnt.

She conceded that portrayal of the saint as a bathing beauty "probably had something to do" with her refusal to accept the proceeds.

Oakley Bidwell, executive secretary of the Atlantic Beach Club, said the club deeply regretted any offense to the hospital.

Careless Match Makes Child Human Torch

Margaret J. Mcluskey, 7, of 7 Park terrace, Everett, became a human torch last night when her clothes caught fire. She had been playing with chum. They had matches. Accidentally a burning match converted the child's dress into flaming fuel. Margy ran screaming through the street. A passer-by, with presence of mind, caught the tot, ripped off her clothes and rushed her to the Whidden Memorial Hospital, above, where her condition is judged serious. Brann Defends Cash Aid by U. S.

Portland, Me., Aug. 28—Without federal aid Maine could not have made economic recovery, Governor Louis J. Brann (D), said here, stamping as unfounded what he asserted was an opposition argument that Maine people were "greatly mortified" at receiving such assistance.

From civic officials and business men he said he learned there was "the greatest desire" to receive government aid. He declared:

"In no instance have I found anyone mortified at receiving federal assistance. Maine could not have recovered without it."

Warden Praises His Prisoners

The 889 prisoners, confined in state prison in Charlestown, considered by Mr. and Mrs. John Public as menaces to society, are just one big, happy and well behaved family, in the opinion of Warden James L. Hogsett.

Proof that peace and harmony reigns at the prison is offered by Warden Hogsett with the statement that at the present time, there is no one in solitary confinement. No other big prison in the country can boast this record, the warden says.

TRENCH WARS OUT OF DATE, SAYS ITALY

By Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 28—Italian military authorities, calculating the results of the recent army maneuvers, declared today that trench warfare was obsolete.

This conclusion, theysaid, results from their observations of the new rapidty in troop movements due partly to the greatly increased use of tanks.

They declared the first onslaught of tanks and fast moving troops would break through a line of trenches and force fighting out into the open.

MOVEMENT RAPID

The movement would then become so rapid that there would be no opportunity to dig trenches nor would there be anything gained by digging them.

Contrasting the eventual war with the last, they said that on the western front, when troops broke through, they entrenched themselves in new "inverted V" positions as they came up against machine gun fire.

The opposing forces then counter-attacked on the basis of the inverted V and forced the originall attackers retirement.

In the eventual war, the Italian experts said, the attacking forces, after breaking through their enemy's lines, will not entrench but will continue to push forward with tanks.

FEWER MEN AT FRONT

Consequently, the eventual war will be with the opposing forces moving back and forth much more rapidly over the battle territory with their gains and losses of ground much more considerable.

The experts said they also expected to fight the eventual war with much fewer men at the front, one reason being a greater use of mechanical weapons and another the difficulty of maintaining a service of supplies owing to enemy aircraft.

Closing of Nurses School Postponed

Plans to close the Long Island hospital training school for nurses at the end of next year as an economy measure, were changed following a battle against the proposed closing, led by City Councillor John J. Doherty.

Dr. Frederick A. Washburn, new institution commissioner who had planned the closing, has ordered that the school be kept open until all student nurses have completed their courses.

TAGGED DRIVER CAN TELL IT TO JUDGE

After the new statewide auto parking law goes into effect October 1, municipal and district court judges will listen to many tales of woe from unfortunate motorists.

Clerk William D. Collins of central municipal court has announced that auto owners who feel that their cars have been wrongly tagged, either by mistake or unfairness, will be able to tell it to a municipal or district court judge for adjustment.

EXCEPTIONS ALLOWED

Clerk Collins explained that the facts that thieves often steal autos and park them after they are no longer of use to them and that police might make a mistake in recording the registration number of a car, have been taken into consideration under the new law.

He also relieved the minds of drivers who feared they might be classed as multiple offenders because they have parking records in various communities. He said:

RECORDS SEPARATE

"For instance a man might be tagged twice within the jurisdiction of the Roxbury court, but if he is tagged down town, he would be classed as a first offender in municipal court and not a third offender. It is his first, second or third appearance in any one court that will determine the penalty. The first $3, the second $5 and the third $10."

Those who feel they have been wrongly tagged, he said, must notify the clerk of court in the districts in which they are tagged within five days after the tagging so that the automatic revocation of their license, which follows violations in which no fines are paid within the prescribed period, can be prevented.

PHANTOM FLEET GIVEN BATTLE

A "phantom enemy fleet" has landed its troops on the Eastern seaboard and New England military forces were being mobilized today against them.

But don't be alarmed, it's all in theory and constitutes "war manoeuvres" participated in by New England's regular army and the national guard.

Headquarters have been established at the Army Base in South Boston, under command of Major-General Fox Conner.

The war game will continue throughout the week and by next Sunday New England troops will theoretically be battling the invader "somewhere in no man's land" on the New Jersey coast.

Truck Strike in N. Y. Threatened

New York, Aug. 28 (US)—Complete tieup of the Port of New York threatened here as truck owners refused union drivers' demands for wage rises.

Present contracts expire August 31. The drivers, who claim they took a voluntary wage reduction of $5 a week in February, 1933, with the understanding the cut would be restored in their new contracts, will hold a general strike meeting Friday.

100 FLEE BLAZE IN STOCKYARD

By Universal Service

Chicago, Aug. 28—A fire which threatened briefly a repetition of the disastrous stockyards fire of May 19, when a loss of ten million dollars was suffered, broke out late yesterday in the slaughter and cooling plant of Armour and Co.

A large part of the city's fire-fighting apparatus was rushed to the scene and after a battle of an hour the flames were brought under control.

More than 100 employes were in the building when the blaze broke out from an undetermined cause. Most of them fled to safety, but some remained to drive out animals which were herded in the structure.

The damage was estimated at about $25,000 by Fire Commissioner Seyferich.

Textile Workers Fear Call to Go Out on Strike

Today the Boston Evening American presents more viewpoints by New England textile workers on the general strike in the trade, scheduled for next Saturday.

The strike has been ordered throughout the nation on a charge that employers refuse to recognize the United Textile Workers of America, under provisions of the NRA code.

To the workers, the strike means everything, and today more of the workers give their opinions:

EMIL LaTOUR, South Broadway, Lawrence, a weaver—Personally, I would not walk out under present conditions. I am working one and two days a week, but I feel that I am being treated as well as I can be by the mill under present conditions.

FRANK TUCKER, Lowell weaver—I went in the big strike in Lawrence in 1912, and lots of others. I don't like them, but it's the only way we'll get anything.

LARRY DAIGNAULT, Margin street, Lawrence, a weaver—Nothing doing on a strike! I was out in 1931. I did a lot of work among the strikers but none of us got anything out of it. We lost the pay we might have earned.

ANGELINA ROTUNDA, Newbury street, Lawrence, a mender—I have about 20 women friends who are working with me one and two days a week in the mill. We all feel the same way about a strike. We will continue to work.

JOHN SANTONE, Merrimack street, Methuen, textile laborer—I have friends who work at different trades in Haverhill and Manchester and they are not as well off as I am now, even if I am only earning a few dollars a week.

ARTHUR MULLIN, Haverhill street, Lawrence, tool setter—I don't see anything to be gained by a strike; just a lot of strife. I don't believe a strike will alter conditions at this time.

SALLY POLONSKI, Arlington street, Lawrence, mender—We don't stand a chance. If there's trouble, the mills will all close down. I have been at the mills nearly every morning since the 1931 strike, looking for work, and I've just got a little. I've worked too hard to get back on the pay list to lose my work.

PATRICK O'DAY of Lowell, weaver—There's too much in a machine way around here. I used to run eight looms but got laid off. The men in my shop now run 24 each.

BEN SUTCLIFFE of North Andover, spinner—I know none of my friends and fellow workers are in favor of a strike at this time. We are satisfied our employers cannot change present conditions and that they are losing money.

GRACE LANGEVIN, Haverhill street, Lawrence, a mender—A strike now will cause great hardship on those few of us who are working. I am not in favor of it.

ROBERT EVISON of Lowell, drawer-in—Sure, I'm in favor of the strike. I don't belong to the union because I can't make enough money to pay the dues. But we need something.

CLYDE SOSTAK, Merrimack street, South Lawrence, comber—I have never taken an active part in any strike. I will not now. I am earning enough to get by with now, although it is very small, but it is much better than nothing.

GIOVANNI MARCO, Elm street, Lawrence, a mule spinner—I am lucky to be getting a little work. My friends feel the same way.

LAURENT DUBOIS, Hancock street, Lawrence, a weaver—If a strike is called now, there is nothing to be gained. The textile workers learned in the strike of 1931, before conditions were as bad as they are now, that the mills were at the point where they would close down entirely. Some of them have not opened yet.

TEETH CLUE IN GIRL SLAYING

By International News Service

Redwood City, Cal., Aug. 28—Baffled by a dearth of clues in their effort to solve the mystery death of a young woman whose nude body was found on King's Mountain, near here, authorities declared today the only hope of identification lies in the teeth.

They believe she was a murder victim.

"The dentist who worked on the girl's teeth should be able to identify her easily," said Dr. J. C. McGovern, county coroner, "because of the peculiar nature of the dental work."

Possibility that the victim may have been Nellie Barnes, also known as Sally Hollister, missing 17-year-old fan dancer, was exploded when Miss Hollister returned to the Berkeley home of Mrs. Harry Higgs with whom she had been living when she dropped from sight, June 4. The girl said she had been visiting friends in San Francisco.

Sir Guy Standing Better After Sting

Hollywood, Aug. 28 (US) — Sir Guy Standing, prominent English actor, was reported to be definitely out of danger from the sting of a black widow spider, whose poison frequently is fatal to humans.

It was stated, however, that the infected leg is painful and badly swollen.

POLICE IN WAR ON STRIKE REDS

"steal" the textile strike from the American Federation of Labor has been ferreted out.

The authorities claim that 20,000 Greater Boston Communists, banded together in what is known as "District No. 1," have been ordered from New York to organize the strikers and make violent demonstrations.

Their avowed purpose is to swell the ranks of the Communists and discredit all opposed, it is declared, with the agents commanded to override authorized labor leaders at all costs.

U. S. MOVES FOR PEACE

Police Superintendent Martin H. King was making plans today and drawing up his police battle forces in readiness for any disturbances in Boston, communistic or otherwise, because of the strike.

The threat of war and bloodshed came even as Chairman Lloyd Garrison of the National Labor Relations Board moved for peace. His mediation plan for tomorrow met with rebuff, however.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the United Textile Workers' strike committee, declared that some textile manufacturers had stocked up on tear gas and machine guns. He said the reports came from Alabama.

WORKER SLASHED

Asked if he believed the reports, he asserted that he did. Asked what he was going to do about it, he declared that manifestos would be sent into the field ordering all disorders curbed unless provoked by employers.

Gorman's declaration came upon the heels of dispatches from Macon, Ga., that told of a clash between non-union and union workers in the mop department of the Atlantic Cotton Mills there.

In moving for peace, Chairman Garrison sought to have both union men and members of the Cotton Textile Institute sit with his board in conference tomorrow, or Thursday, if the earlier date were impossible.

FED UP ON PROMISES

But Gorman had previously insisted that the strike could not be averted or delayed through conference. His declaration was:

"We are fed up on promises. What we want is action—concessions by the employers."

The temper of the employers was expressed in the statement of George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute and chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority. He branded the strike as:

"An attempted substitution of force for the orderly processes of the National Industrial Recovery Act."

TEXTILE CODE REJECTED

A surprise and still another wedge to open up the breach between manufacturers and workers came in the unanimous action of representatives of the cotton garment industry. They met in New York last night.

Without dissension a resolution was adopted that rejected the amendment of the textile code as ordered by President Roosevelt last Tuesday. This federal order provided for a 36, instead of a 40-hour week, and an increase of 10 per cent in piece rates over those of May 1.

The meeting further authorized Raymond A. Walsh, of Washington, to "take legal steps if necessary" to protect the rights and interests of the members of the cotton garment manufacturers' organization.

Executive officers of the code authority were requested to place before President Roosevelt notice of the resolution adopted with the view of having the presidential wage-and-hour order rescinded. Legal steps were contemplated should the President insist that the order remain in force.

GORMAN INVITED

As the general situation stood today, the strike call will be sounded for after midnight on Friday, technically Sept. 1. Because the textile industry is operating on a five-day week with mills closed on Saturday, the effect cannot be noted until Sept. 4, the day after Labor Day.

Although no formal overtures have been made to the White House, Gorman declared:

"I am confident that if the President knew the exact situation in the industry, he would take action."

The entire executive council of the U. T. W. will meet here Thursday with President Thomas F. McMahon to decide, among other things, the date of the walkout of silk and woolen workers.

Garment Industry Defies Roosevelt Code Order

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 28—President Roosevelt and the NRA were confronted today with open opposition from the cotton garment industry.

Representatives of the industry from all parts of the country voted yesterday to reject a presidential order of a week ago lowering hours and increasing wages for 250,000 workers. It was the first time an entire industry had defied the President's power under the NRA to change hours and wages.

The President issued an order last Tuesday providing a maximum week of 36 hours instead of 40, with no decrease in the minimum weekly wage, and also increasing piece rates 10 per cent over those of May 1.

This order the manufacturers turned down as "unjustifiable, unwarranted, burdensome and inequitable." They authorized their counsel, Raymond A. Walsh, in Washington to take steps to protect their interests, and indicated they would fight the President's order in the courts.

The manufacturers issued a statement saying the increase in consumer cost under the order would be at least 9 per cent instead of 2 per cent as held by the NRA. The statement said also that hourly wages in the industry are 20 per cent higher than on July 1, 1929.

Pitchfork Pierces Maine Man's Legs

East Waterford, Me., Aug. 28 (AP)—With both legs pierced by a pitchfork when he fell from a load of hay today, Roland S. Benton was rushed to a Portland hospital where his injuries were regarded as serious. The upturned pitchfork tines entered his legs above the knees and emerged from his thighs.

service employes are paid twenty-six million dollars, unpaid arrears in salary, an average of $1444.44 for each of eighteen thousand.

How do you think they and their friends will vote at the coming election? Will they vote against the Democratic Roosevelt ticket? Chicago estimates that the spending of those twenty-six million dollars will move $100,000,000 of merchandise within three days.

Learn from Dr. Florence E. Meier, able young lady scientist of the Smithsonian Institution, that you live miraculously protected from "eight killer rays."

The sun's "killer rays," all of them of the "ultra-violet" class, above the violet as it appears in our spectrum, bombard the earth incessantly, and would wipe human beings off the earth were it not for a thin layer of ozone, completely surrounding the earth, like an army belt, high up in our atmosphere. You might as well add to your nightly prayer:

"And bless that layer of ozone."

It keeps out or deadens the worst of the rays, as dark glasses keep the sun from hurting your eyes.

The most deadly of the eight "killer" comes through in quantities just sufficient to render great service, without destroying us. It keeps down the growth of the "green algae," tiny, one-celled plants that grow in streams. If that killer ray did not hold them back the algae would clog all the streams of the world, as the "water hyacinth" clogs streams in Florida.

Unrestricted, the algae would have caused the earth to be flooded, and human life here might have been impossible, or limited to boats and high mountain tops.

On the other hand, it is fortunate for the earth, as we know it, that the algae were allowed to develop in moderation.

An angstrom unit, as you know, is one ten millionth of a millimeter, and a millimeter is one thousandth part of a meter, so an angstrom is a short "unit."

BLUE RIBBON Genuine ALE

Blue Ribbon copies no other ale ever brewed, yet delightfully retains every traditional ale characteristic that has made this mellow drink a world favorite for centuries.

We will not attempt to describe the smooth, mellow taste of Blue Ribbon Genuine Ale. It can't be done! But we are saying to you that its bouquet is so inviting—its rich body and full strength are so satisfying—its tang is so completely delightful, you'll know instantly that here is the ale you've always wanted.

Blue Ribbon Genuine Ale is truly exceptional. Order a case today for home use. Insist on it by name wherever you are. Its reasonable price will surprise you.

WHAT ALE IS:

Ale and beer differ in formula, process, character, and strength, ale being stronger. The most important process difference is in the yeast and kind of fermentation.

Requiring different yeast and different treatment, the making of ale and beer should be carefully separated. So-called ales, made in the same fermenting and storage rooms with beer, are usually neither true ale nor true beer, but "crossbreeds."

Made in a plant built for that purpose, Blue Ribbon is Genuine Ale—no half way product, no crossbreed—real ale with the tang, bouquet, vigor, that ale should have.

CULT BOY GIVEN 50-50 CHANCE IN OPERATION

Fort Payne, Ala., Aug. 28—Surgeons' instruments glinting in the flickering lamp—a mother's lament lost in the weird chant of the Holiness Cult's "unknown tongue"—a boy with a "50-50 chance for life."

Dr. W. T. Miller, one of two surgeons who operated on eight-year-old Wallace Doyle Sharp, Jr., straightened from his work and said:

"He has an even chance."

For days Wallace's parents had refused to permit an operation on his infected leg.

"Th Lord will heal him through faith," they said.

CULT SINGS, PRAYS

Finally the father gave in. But the operation must be performed in the Sharp home, he said, so members of the cult might aid with prayers, songs and talking in the "unknown tongue."

Despite the lack of hospital facilities, the doctors scraped eight inches of bone in the boy's leg. When he awoke from the anesthetic, part of the sweling was gone.

His condition was "better than I expected," said Dr. Miler, who had predicted amputation as the price of further delay.

SINGING GOES ON

Once during the operation Mrs. Sharp shrieked, "They're murdering my son!" Friends uieted her and her lamentations became submerged in the chanting. The singing continued long after the surgeons were done.

Dr. Miler warned the parents that undue excitement would lessen Wallace's chance for life. He urged that the well-meaning friends remain away until the boy was better.

The throng dwindled away. Quiet enveloped the Sharp home. But science and faith alike watched that "50-50 chance" of Wallace.

COUPONS OFFER CANAL CRUISE

For the latest of the excursions which have proved so popular this summer, the Cape Cod Steamship Company steamer Steel Pier will pull away from Commercial wharf next Thursday with another load of excursionists bound for a day of fun at half rate.

The Steel Pier will leave her wharf at 10 A. M. for the 125-mile cruise down through Boston Harbor and Massachusetts Bay, whence she will swing west through Cape Cod Canal and into Buzzards Bay.

Coupons entitling the holders to half fare rates—$1 for adults and 50 cents for children—will be printed tomorrow in the Boston Evening American.

Autoists Beaten by 2 "Thumbers"

South Hadley Falls, Aug. 28—Two "thumbers" cast insults at two young men motorists here, and when the motorists returned to offer objections, the "thumbers" beat them up after a 10-minute fight.

The "thumbers" threw the driver back into his car and draped his companion over the hood. They then escaped before police appeared. The names of the participants were not learned.

With Duchess in His Arms, Cellini Dreamt Art

No Woman Ever Happier for His Love

By KONRAD BERCOVICI

"How dare you ask ten thousands of ducats for your Perseus!" the Prince of Florence raged. "Cities and great palaces are built with ten thousand ducats."

"Your excellency," I rejoined, "can find multitudes of men who are able to build you cities and palaces, but you will not find one man in the world who could make a second Perseus."

Michael Angelo, his master, was still alive and working when Cellini said this. And yet Benvenuto was not bragging.

Benvenuto Cellini's dagger was in his teeth when his hands were busy with chisel and hammer. As an artist he was the most mature man that ever lived. As a man he remained a child to the end of his days.

When he was lucky a powerful friend, a cardinal or a prince interceded for him. But there were occasions when even the most influential personages found it difficult not to give him up to the hangman. Yet even while in jail, in the shadows of the gallows, he planned and worked during every one of his wakeful hours.

FELT HIMSELF FIGHTER

His reputation as a ruffian equalled his reputation as an artist. He talked as much of his ability with the dagger as of his ability with the chisel.

Women were much attracted to him. Strong women, like the Duchess of Florence, converted their attraction into hatred and intrigue against him and opposed him in everything. But no woman, not even the servant girl he married in his later years, was ever made happy by his love.

With the Duchess in his arms his mind was thinking of a block of marble out of which he intended to carve out his eternity.

That Duchess of Florence, really Princess of Florence, was no fool and she was a fine connoisseur of art. Her husband, of the great Medici family, had inherited from his ancestors an enthusiasm for art, but not their spirit of appreciation. The Princess had that.

Even while she opposed Benvenuto she knew that he was superior to all the other artists. She opposed him chiefly because she could not conquer him. Because she knew that she could never be to him more than a second choice. His art came first.

FREDERIC MARCH CONSTANCE BENNETT

Frederic March and Constance Bennett as they appear in "The Affairs of Cellini," gripping story of centuries ago, which comes to Loew's State next Friday.

The Duchess of Florence swayed frequently between giving Cellini her heart and ordering that he should be hanged.

Freed from jail, instead of repenting of his deeds, Benvenuto Cellini ran through the streets and said to whomsoever cared to listen to him:

"Everybody knows I am the greatest man in Florence. A thousand years may pass before another one like me will live again."

The duchess had ears . . . and all of Cellini's enemies had tongues to repeat what they had heard.

The Duchess of Florence was a ripe woman, a charming woman in full maturity. Cellini was about thirty-five when she saved his life. She expected gratitude, devotion. But the hangman's noose was no sooner raised from the artist's neck when he began to talk of the work he must finish and the work he was planning.

It was humiliating not to be able to make a man forget his art while he was in her arms.

And yet, history knows the Duchess of Florence and the Duchess of Etamps, and dozens of other women of that period only because of the living interest the world has maintained for four hundred years in Benyenuto Cellini's life and work.

KEY TO ETERNITY

The Duchess of Florence once gave Cellini the key to her house. That key opened for her a door to posterity.

"And then I went to Pisa."

Thus ends the autobiography of Cellini. He was sixty-two. He lived nine more years, fathered several children, and died at the age of seventy-two, in Florence.

Humble enough! But I am convinced that once in Heaven, Cellini, ranting between work and the adoration of angels, was heard to cry, "I am the greatest man that ever died."

And meeting the Duchess of Florence there he asked, "Who are you, madame? I don't remember ever having fashioned you out of stone or silver. You look as if Bandinelli, that bungler who called himself a sculptor, has spoiled another block of marble.

This feature will be continued tomorrow.

NO MATTER WHAT KIND of a Fair Thing you are, or are not, you could have found something that would have given you that devastating allure at the Hickson Fashion Parade in the Pavilion-by-the-Sea, Del Monte's at Magnolia, yesterday at tea time . . .

That is the outstanding thing about the new fall fashions . . . you don't have to suit them, they suit you. You may be sinuous, amusing, appealing or dashing this season by the length of your gown, the tilt of your beret, the naivete of your ermine or the swagger of your tweeds . . . take it from us its inspiring!

You might have a personality for every affair of the day and never be monotonous . . . youth will pervade the sports and daytime suits but sophistication will preside at the cocktail hour and into the velvety dusk . . . black is the high favorite for every hour, even black taffeta with huge tulle wings for the debutante. Evening gowns are still trailing notwithstanding rumors to the contrary . . . burgundy red, royal blue and golden brown were among those shown.

New Fashions in Furs

FURS WILL BE SUMPTUOUS and gorgeous this season . . . if your assets are showing signs of an autumn thaw. Russian ermine lavishly trimmed with sable is suggested for that two weeks of Grand Opera which we are promised this winter, or a silky mink still holds its place in the hearts of lovely ladies . . . in either you will be a marked woman. Seal in many shades will brighten sports jackets . . . a golden brown is especially flattering to blondes and blue seal would be dazzling worn in the snow.

Berets have staged a terrific comeback but they look like nothing you have ever seen before . . . pancakes, potato chips, dog's ears, hill-billys and visor brims are only a few of the fantastic shapes we saw yesterday . . . Mrs. Paul D. Rust, Jr., looked especially well in the weird twirls and twists of velvet and felt which we are going to wear as hats this autunm . . . and we are going to wear them.

FRANCES SORTWELL

The tailor-made suit will be in every well-dressed Fair Things wardrobe this fall . . . and the snouzy scarves and blouses which complete the ensemble are too, too bewildering. Polly Gardiner wore a perfectly marvelous sculptural creation of gray flannel with navy polka dotted scarf and wavy pancake beret . . . another costume which might supplement it was a gray kid swagger for freezing days with scarlet scarf . . . this combination of gray and red is very popular among Who's Who in the style world.

Dashing in Brown Tweed Norfolk Suit

ISABEL GARDNER LOOKS HER VERY BEST in evening things and clinging black velvet does things to her . . . it throws her delicate profile and deep gold hair into beautiful relief. She was very dashing in brown tweed Norfolk suit with Alpine hat . . .

Among the best of the society mannikins is Kitty Talbot, always a favorite to wear new styles and to be seen in them . . . in deep fleecy beaver coat with brown felt beret with jaunty feather sweeping under the brim, she was Miss 1934 in person. In a gold lame evening cloak with waist length cape of dark kolinsky, she would have made a sensation among the stronger sex . . . but there were none present. This was a day when ladies meet . . .

Perhaps there is no debutante who has grown up quite so quickly as Griselda Higginson, a beautiful, dark-eyed brunette with real personality. Hair as black as night, skin like a creamy gardenia and lustrous dark eyes, she suited the dressy black afternoon coats and furs in which she modelled . . . pearl stud earrings gave her that French air so intriquing to the swains.

Black the Predominating Color

LILY WARREN WAS THE SWEET engenue in whatever she was displaying . . . there was so much black being shown we can scarcely remember the light tones. We glimpsed one sheath of silver cloth under an ermine cloak and a rusty red shot with gold underneath a sable wrap . . . a black cellophane gown under snowy ermine was another striking model.

Katherine Winthrop and Frances Proctor wore the sports togs well . . . they are both of the athletic type.

We took a chance on a gown from Nancy Leiter who was doing a splendid business in them, dressed in white silk piped with lipstick red. Frances Sortwell was also taking chances on some beauty aids . . . we were beyond all such aid after our mad dash down from Boston.

Gown of Morning-Glory Blue Print

IN A GOWN WHICH SHE CLAIMED was "home-made," Mrs. Wilbar Higgins was mistress of ceremonies for the Christopher Shop . . . it was a very becoming morning-glory blue print.

Pretty Mrs. James Cunningham Grey attended with Miss Margaret Emerson in black and pink coin dot print with just the last tilt in black velvet berets . . . "Margo" was in brown and green sweater and sport skirt.

Mrs. James C. Duane was in black flowered print with a party, Mrs. Frederick Winthrop came to watch daughter, "Kay," walk the gangplank of fashion . . . Miss Constance Learned motored over from Marblehead for tea . . . Mrs. Edward Warren eventually found her table . . .

Mrs. Clark

We hear that the stork is hovering over the "Tim" Clark's chimneys . . . there was much to be seen and little to be heard yesterday.

MISS BARBARA HEYWOOD WEDS SATURDAY IN CAPE CEREMONY

NEW FALL STYLES INTEREST NORTH SHORE SOCIETY

MISS POLLY GARDINER

MISS GRISELDA HIGGINSON

NEW SUITS FOR FALL were among the highlights of the fashion parade which was held at Del Monte's at Magnolia, yesterday, for the benefit of the Christopher Shop. Miss Polly Gardiner, one of the popular society girls who acted as models, was snapped wearing a creation of grey tweed, with silver fox and a rough felt hat by Agnes. A black broadcloth suit with silver fox is being worn by Miss Griselda Higginson. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Junior Leaguer Selects Her Attendants

A WEDDING of great interest in social circles will be solemnized September 1 at Centerville on Cape Cod, when Miss Barbara Heywood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Heywood, becomes the bride of Mr. Benjamin Rush Field, Jr., of New York City.

The ceremony will be performed in the late afternoon and will be followed by a reception at Fair Harbor, the Centerville estate of the bride's parents. The Right Reverend Frank W. Starrett of Pennsylvania will read the marriage service.

Cousin as Aid

Miss Elenita Cowee, a cousin of Miss Heywood, will be her maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Jane MacLeod and Miss Catherine Carney of Boston, Miss Aldys Squire of West Orange, N. J., and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller of Pittsfield.

Attending the bridegroom as best man will be Charles Van I. Cuddeback of Port Jervis, New York, and the usher corps will be composed of the Messrs. John S. Chapman of Greenwich, Ct.; John B. Thurston of New York, Frederick Groehl of New York, John Yarnelle of Litchfield, Ct., George Cummings and Seth Heywood, Jr., of Boston.

Junior Leaguer

After graduating from Miss Hall's school the prospective bride was presented to society and elected to membership in the Junior League. Mr. Field, a son of Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin R. Field of New York, was graduated in 1931 from Williams College. After their wedding journey Mr. Field and his bride will be at home at 64 Kensington road, Bronxville, New York.

Miss Winslow on Program

The Sunday concert of Miss Dorothy Sands at the Town House Theater in Peterborough, N. H., met with such instantaneous success that Howard Inches, director of the Peterborough Dramatic Festivals will hold her over for appearances in her new solo drama, "Styles in Acting" which will be presented as the regular and last production on August 29, 30 and 31 and September 1.

Miss Miriam Winslow, Boston society dancer, and her company of concert dancers will mark the close of the summer season of the Dramatic Festivals at the Town House Theater on Sunday evening September 2, with a program of interpretative dancing. Her production is beautifully and authentically costumed and undoubtedly will be one of the most interesting of the summer attractions to be seen in New England summer resorts this season.

Greene, Walker Ceremony in Cambridge

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage yesterday afternoon of Miss Margaret Warren Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Armstrong Walker of Pembroke, Bermuda and Siasconset, Mass., to Mr. Harding Updike Greene of Cambridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins Updike Greene of Falmouth and Daytona Beach, Fla.

The ceremony was performed at Kings Chapel in the presence of the immediatee families and a few intimate friends. Mr. Walker gave his daughter in marriage and Miss Louise Wells Curtis and Mr. John Gedney Cushman of Boston were tne maid of honor and best man respectively.

Mr. Greene and his bride will sail today for a wedding trip in England and upon their return will be at home in Cambridge.

Mrs. Greene was graduated from the Dwight School in Englewood, New Jersey, and from Vassar College. She also attended the University at Lausanne. Mr. Greene graduated from Columbia University and is general manager and a director of the Cambridge Electric Light Company and a trustee of the Cambridgeport Savings Bank.

Cape Premiere Draws Many Leaders

Many prominent summer residents of the Cape served as patronesses for last evening's performance of the "Cradle Song" at the Beach Theater in West Falmouth by members of the Beach Theater Dramatic School.

This comedy, by G. Martinez Sierra, first produced in this country some years ago by Eva LeGallienne and her troupe, was directed by Miss Ruth Wilton, who appeared in the original cast. She has been director of dancing this summer at the Beach Theater School, which has been under the direction of the well known actress, Hilda Spong.

The proceeds of "Cradle Song" will be applied to a scholarship fund.

Among the patronesses who attended the opening performance were Mrs. Arthur W. Bell of Boston and Falmouth, Mrs. G. H. A. Clowes, Mrs. W. Murray Crane, Mrs. James R. Jewett, Mrs. Walter Janney, Mrs. Frank R. Lillie, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. E. C. Mayo, Mrs. Seward Prosser, Mrs. Charles R. Stockard, Mrs. J. P. Warbasse, Mrs. Edward A. Norman, Mrs. Franklin A. Park, and Mrs. Alfred Meyer.

Others seen in the smart audience were Mrs. Sidney Winslow, Jr., Mrs. F. W. C. Foster, and Mrs. George J. Hill of South Orleans, and Mrs. Fulton Oursler of Falmouth Cliffs, and Mrs. J. T. Johnstone of Quisset.

Chatty Notes of Society

MISS ELEANOR CLAFLIN, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Claflin of Dean road, Brookline, has just returned from Wyoming, where she spent the summer at the White Grass Ranch. Miss Claflin was graduated from Winsor School in June and will be presented in the autumn.

DR. FANNIE FERN ANDREWS of Commonwealth avenue is returning to Boston on September 1 from Europe, where she has been representing the United States, on appointment by President Roosevelt, at the Third International Conference on Public Instruction called by the Swiss government and held in Geneva.

MISS ROSE L. DEXTER of Boston is enjoying a few days in Gotham, where she is registered at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Other Bostonians at the same hotel include Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Dunn.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT S. OGDEN of Charles street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son at the Phillips House. Mrs. Ogden is the former Miss Edith Mitton.

Supper Dance

A COLLEGE SUPPER DANCE by a group in and around the South Shore will wind up the activities for Vacation House at Sunset Point for this year. This is always a pet charity with the summer folks because of its large scope and the nature of its work. Pemberton Inn, at Hull, has been selected as the place and next Friday evening the time, with Miss Virginia Prout ably directing a committee from Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, North Scituate and Allerton. Her aids will be Jane Holland, Mary Clarrissa McCarthy, Dorothy Hatch, Joan Sawyer and Marguerite Richardson, Madelyn Joyce, Mary Thomas and Alice Burlow.

Mrs. Daniel J. Lynch is supervising the event.

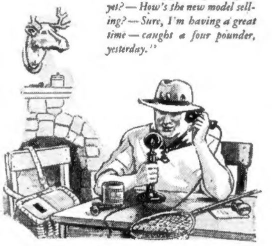
Lynn Population Up 2273 in 1933

Since the federal census in 1930, the population of Lynn has jumped 2273, according to figures taken from the Massachusetts unemployment census. The census for last year gives 104,593 as compared with a population of 102,320 in 1930. Of last year's population, 27.3 per cent were unemployed.

Married Teachers May Get Jobs Back

New Bedford, Aug. 28—When the New Bedford school board meets Friday night they are expected to restore the majority of the 37 married women teachers dropped for economy reasons two years ago. Small groups of these women have been given back their positions this summer.



HOW'S TRICKS?

"Did Bill get Jenkins' order?—Has the Bridgeport shipment gone yet?—How's the new model selling?—Sure, I'm having a great time—caught a four pounder, yesterday."

MANY men make occasional telephone calls to their offices during vacation, just to keep in touch. Such calls, being brief and to the point, don't interfere with vacation schedules, but serve as an admirable check. With times and conditions uncertain, they are bound to help one's peace of mind, and they might turn out to be a wise precaution.

To illustrate the low cost of toll calls made during the night rate period, the following typical rates are cited for a 3-minute station-to-station call (that is, a call by number) after 8:30 p.m. from

BOSTON

TO		TO		TO
Rockland, Me.	.50	Bennington, Vt.	.40	Northampton	.30
St. Johnsbury, Vt.	.50	Claremont, N.H.	.40	Vineyard Haven	.3
Rutland, Vt.	.45	Old Orchard Me.	.35	Hyannis	.25

These rates are from down-town Boston. Rates to toll points from Suburban Exchanges may be slightly more or less.

Radio Musicale Adapted From "Squaw Man"

By N. F. T.

Another of those lilting light opera offerings is waiting, with Gladys Swarthout in the studio spotlight. Such is the 10 to 11 o'clock 60-minute melody setting (WEEI) with the weekly "Beauty Box Theater" broadcast takes the air tonight. This time loudspeaker patrons who tune in are slated to hear "The White Eagle," by Rudolph Friml, as based on Royle's famous "Squaw Man" story of days gone by.

Gladys Swarthout

As in numerous presentations of the kind aired previously, John Barclay will supply the barItoning in support of Miss Swartout. She sings, cast in the romantic role of "Silver Wing" an Indian girl whose love saves the life of an English rancher embroiled in a cunning Western conspiracy. Three hits of the peace, namely "Give Me One Hour" "Gather The Rose" and "The Regimental Song" will afford striking vocal features.

SHOWMANSHIP SHOWS

Yesterday, when the Boston well wishers of Fred Waring and his "Pennsylvanians" laid out a lavish luncheon for the young "mike" maestro at the Hotel Statler, all that Fred himself could have was graham crackers and milk. However, he hopes to feel better shortly and partake more fully of heavier festive board fare. Upon being presented with a handsome silver service, bestowed as a genuine old-fashioned surprise, Fred admitted he couldn't quite summon suitable words to utter. That is as a "thank you" speech. Spontaneously, he asked his entire company to rise and contribute one of those grand Glee Club arrangements. Did their rendition of "The Winter Song" serve adequately as an acknowledgement of the tribute? Every guest present gave "yes" for an answer, substantiated by abundant applause.

Monetary developments occupy the 9 o'clock place in the WNAC program plan tonight, with Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, choosing "Treasury Finances" for his topic. It is the first coast to coast broadcast Mr. Morgenthau has made since joining the Roosevelt cabinet to succeed the late William H. Woodin.

RETURN BY REQUEST

Followers of the "Secret Agent X-9" program (WAAB) each Tuesday evening, come 6:30, will recall the vocal airing by little Baby Bernadette Franckina, 7 year old Hyde Park songstress. Admirers of Baby Bernadette and her singing, have urged the Chief of the Secret Agents to award her a return appearance. Thus and so the program this evening will hold forth with Baby Bernadette featured as the guest star.

Given in Marriage

— By Adele Garrison —

Avis Arlen capitulates in the matter of the bridesmaid's gown, but Madge feels that the scheming girl will succeed in causing some trouble at the wedding.

CHAPTER 126

I FOUND myself shaking with a combination of nerves and anger as I waited for Avis Arlen to answer the ultimatum I had given her concerning her bridesmaid's gown. But I had no intention of giving in to the girl, whose impudence I felt was colossal. I did not care in that moment what Philip Veritzen's reaction would be to my stern measures with Avis, for whose invitation to be a bridesmaid he had asked.

On one thing I was determined, of course. I would take the whole blame upon myself, where it was due, making it very clear to Mr. Veritzen that the issue lay solely between Avis and me, and that Mary and Noel knew nothing of the controversy. But the resolution, with its possible penalty of the severance of my professional relations with Mr. Veritzen, did not make it easier for my nerves while I waited for Avis to answer me.

It did not seem possible that any girl could be so thick-skinned as to persist in being bridesmaid, or even in attending the wedding, after the curt language I had been forced to use to her. I knew that almost any other girl would have flown into a rage and refused to come to the wedding.

AVIS WITHDRAWS HER OBJECTIONS

But not Avis Arlen. To gain her point, I think she would be slavish in her subjection to anyone in authority, and I was not greatly surprised when, after a silence of nearly half a minute, her voice came over the telephone with its most saccharine accents.

"Oh, dear Mrs. Graham," she cooed "how could you misunderstand me so? I did not understand that it mattered so much, so small a wedding, so hurried the preparations."

I bit my lip to keep back an angry retort at this mean-spirited slur upon Mary's wedding, but I knew that she was giving in, and could afford to be generous—and silent.

If you'll just tell me where I am to go, and what I am to do, I shall obey you implicitly," she said.

"Thank you," I answered, making my voice cordial again, and then repeated my directions for her meeting with Helena Brixton.

"I am sorry to have appeared harsh, Avis," I said apologetically as I finished, "but I simply could not grant your request."

"Oh, that is perfectly all right," she said, and I could not blame her for a certain loftiness in her tone. "Pray do not think of it again. What time will I get the gown?"

AVIS PLOTTING AGAIN

Something over-eager in her voice emphasized the warning that had been in my thoughts before.

"You will not have to bother about that at all," I said. "Mrs. Brixton will attend to everything. Do just as she says and then plan to take the train reaching Bridgehampton at one-thirty. Better get your hair done in the city. We'll have a competent woman here who can put anything straight that has gone awry."

"How wonderfully you have planned everything!" she said. "But don't hesitate to tell me if I can save Mrs. Brixton any trouble with those gowns. I could easily bring out my own that day, you know."

"Of course," I agreed easily, "but it isn't necessary. Now I must ask you to excuse me. Please remember me kindly to your mother. I am looking forward with much pleasure to seeing her again at the wedding. Remember, we are meeting you at Bridgehampton at one-thirty, day after tomorrow."

"Who will meet us?" she asked sharply. "Oh, dear Mrs. Graham, don't you think that you could manage so that No-el could meet us? There is something that I must say to No-el, something I must explain. It is terribly important to me, and to him."

"I do not know who can meet you, Avis," I said quietly, although I again had the primitive impulse to reach across the miles of space and manhandle her. "But someone will be there. Goodby." I hung up the receiver and turned to find Lillian at my elbow with a small cup of steaming coffee, creamed and sugared to my liking.

"Drink this before you do another thing," she said. "You look as if you were ready to drop."

"I am," I said taking the coffee gratefully. "That girl is really—"

"Don't say it!" Lillian advised, grinning. You wouldn't be able to say your prayers tonight, you'd have so many naughty words on your conscience."

"I know it," I admitted, smiling ruefully.

"But she gave in, I noticed," Lillian said triumphantly. "Now the rest of the telephoning can wait, I'm sure, until after breakfast. Let's see, you want to warn Helena about keeping that gown away from Avis and you want to ask Phil to send Otto down for Carolyn and Marion. You can't get Helena until she arrives in the city, and it would be worth anybody's life to get Phil Veritzen up at this hour. So come on and get your breakfast."

I hesitated, and Lillian looked at me sharply.

"Don't tell me you have anything else on the well-known bean," she said.

"I have to telephone Edith Fairfax," I said miserably.

Sophistication in Hours After Twilight

By Dorothy Roe

(Authentic last minute fashions from New York—the style center of America.)

YOU MAY be as grand as you like after dark this season, but for daytime you'll have to be tailored.

Nobody would ever recognize the tweed-suited, oxford-shod girl you are in the morning as the glamorous creature in sequins and ermine that is your after-dark reincarnation.

There's no halfway business about the stern line of demarcation between the elegance of the evening mode and the austere simplicity that is commanded for daytime.

The smartest street, school and office dresses this season are schoolgirlish affairs with tailored collars and cuff-link cuffs. Sometimes they come in pretty marvelous materials, it's true. You'll see severe shirtwaist frocks in metal shot woolens and such, but they're shirtwaist frocks, just the same.

There are two-piece affairs of jersey and knit. There are soft angora checks and plaids.

There are velveteens in deep, rich fall colors.

But the lines must be simple, the gadgets few.

In the evening you can let yourself go, and do a modern imitation of Cleopatra or Helen of Troy, even to the jewels in your hair.

Wrap-Around Shadow Slip

By MARIAN MARTIN

This slip has many nice things about it. It fits beautifully. It is shadow proof and it permits the introduction of a dainty "modesty piece" in the front. Two other points will endear it to the woman who selects it for her fall wardrobe. One of these is that it is a wrap-around and therefore adjustable and most figures change just a bit in transit from one season to another. The other reason is that it is so simple to make and so quickly finished—the moral of the little tale being—get you some crepe de chine or cambric and use this pattern!

Pattern 9070 may be ordered only in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards 39-inch fabric and ¼ yard of 3-inch lace.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

How would you like a book of fashions designed for sun-drenched days and starlit nights? It tells you about, and has pictures of everything from a wedding dress to a garden frock. It shows you the latest fabrics and talks wisely about beauty. In short . . . it's a treasure! It's the current edition of the Marian Martin pattern book and it costs 15 cents. The book and pattern together are 25 cents.

Send your order to Boston American Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Off to School in Hand-Knits

PEG-BOARDS . . . the kindergarten circle . . . the sweet-faced teacher . . . your pretty, starched frock, a fuzzy warm sweater and cap in a color that reminded you of mint jelly candies . . . these are often the things that the first years of school hold most vividly. Don't all of you remember at least one favorite thing mother brought out for you to wear? Here is just such a set, for the child of kindergarten age and on. The beret is perky, and the sweater has unusual lapels and a tricky button arrangement. If you would like directions for knitting this set, write to Annice Brink, Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Monogrammed Handkerchief Is Ideal Teacher's Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My teacher of a previous year has been aiding me for the last few months in my studies. I wish to give her some nice gift. She has refused to take any money, whatsoever.

My father manages a woman's apparel shop, if clothing would be suitable gift. If so, how should I send it as I do not know her size or what she would like.

If this won't do, will you kindly suggest something else?

F.

I'm one of the ones who think that plain white handkerchiefs, beautifully monogrammed, is one of the perfect gifts, always welcome. In your father's shop wouldn't that be a possible gift? You might choose some handkerchiefs for day wear, and some "small squares" for evening wear; or one or two beautiful scarves; or a purse, for day wear or a white one for evening wear.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have received an invitation and it was addressed like this: "Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jones and family." I have three married daughters, two of them seem to think that the invitation included them, too, but I do not agree with them. My point is that they should have received separate invitations, addressed to them in their own homes. I think the invitation was for my husband and myself and our single daughters living at home. What do you think? I would like to have this question settled for all times.

WAITING.

No one could answer this question for you with final definiteness except the people who sent the invitation. It is because of this sort of confusion and indefiniteness that I am constantly urging in my column that this incorrect form—"and family"—should never be used on an invitation.

You are, of course, thoroughly right in maintaining the separate invitations should have been sent, but this doesn't help much in solving your present problem. If these friends couldn't send separate invitations, they still should not have used that incorrect phrase "and family." They should have listed, on the envelope, the names of the members of your family whom they meant to include in the invitation.

Camp Inspires Self-Reliance

By LISA GRENELLE

SENDING a boy or a girl away to school or camp is usually a wrench, both for the parents and for the child.

On one side we have the martinet parents, who feel that a child, particularly a boy, should be tossed into the world at a certain age, regardless of his inclination or temperament. Then there are the clinging parents who tearfully make up their minds to send Jimmie to school or camp.

It is unwise, and distinctly risky, to send a child away from home until he is reasonably self-sufficient and until he has some ability to get on with his contemporaries. He must have some basic knowledge of how to mix with people.

Neither a child nor an adult will fight its own battles if it can get anyone else to fight for it. In the same way, no child will learn to build his own defense against loneliness, slight and humiliation if someone else is there to build them for him.

But suppose that mother is four miles from the school—what happens then? When the first wave of homesickness strikes Jimmie, when he is first beaten, has had his first quarrel—he won't try to fight back. He knows mother is nearby, he knows mother will help him and comfort him.

On the other hand, if he knows mother is a long way off and can't do anything about it, he'll set to work on the situation himself—because he must.

Poor Lead May Show Direct Gain

By Josephine Culbertson

There is an old proverb which states that "in the kingdom of the blind, the one-eyed is king." Applying the philosophy here expressed to the question of the choice of a lead at Contract Bridge, I should say that when a hand contains nothing but bad leads, the one least likely to be disadvantageous should be chosen. There is, for instance, a widely held and actually sound theory that a lead of a low card from a King against a suit declaration is bad. It is. There is also the sound theory that the opening lead of an Ace is bad.

It is. Honors serve their greatest usefulness in the mimic warfare of Bridge by capturing other honors held by the enemy, and when the hand containing an honor plays first to any trick, the primary value of that honor is sacrificed, at least temporarily. But when the leader holds no suit which offers a favorable lead, he should not throw up his hands in despair because he must make a lead which he has been told to avoid. Maybe one of the "bad" leads will show a direct gain.

In the recent Masters' Individual Championship Tournament held at Crockford's Club, New York, there was one hand dealt which presented to the East player a problem in bidding and to the South player a problem in leading. The hand was:

East, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ J 10 4 ♡ 10 9 4 ♢ K J 9 6 4 2 ♣ J
♠ Q 9 8 6 2 ♡ — ♢ Q 10 3 ♣ A 9 8 6 4	North West East South	♠ K 7 ♡ K Q J 8 7 5 3 ♢ 5 ♣ Q 10 2
	♠ A 5 3 ♡ A 6 2 ♢ A 8 7 ♣ K 7 5 3

So far as the bidding was concerned, four of the seven East players, including such well-known stars as Howard Schenken, Sydney Rusinow and Edward Hymes, Jr., opened the bidding with three hearts. One, George Reith, opened with the bid of four hearts, and two were content to open with the bid of one heart. One of those who undertook a three heart contract was doubled and fulfilled it with an overtrick, and the contract of four hearts was doubled and made.

The question of the lead was extremely difficult. One player, Samuel Fry, Jr., found the play that defeated three hearts. He elected to make a low lead from the club King, reasoning that the club lead was not necessarily dangerous because the opening Pre-emptive bid was no indication of honor strength in the other suits. This lead proved to be the "killing opening." East permitted the trick to run to his Queen, and then laid down the heart King. South won, and now feeling that whatever damage could occur from his leading away from the King had already occurred, followed with another club.

Much to his satisfaction, North ruffed and returned a spade. South won with the Ace, and now, not being certain that his partner had another trump, laid down the Ace of diamonds. This was at least a guarantee that no overtricks would be made. Having taken this trick, he led another club, and North utilized his last trump to defeat the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A 6 5 ♡ A Q ♢ Q 10 7 5 2 ♣ A K 3
♠ K 10 ♡ K 3 ♢ A K 6 ♣ J 10 9 8 4 2	North West East South	♠ Q 9 8 ♡ 9 7 5 4 ♢ J 9 8 4 ♣ 7 5
	♠ J 7 4 3 2 ♡ J 10 8 6 2 ♢ 3 ♣ Q 6

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Picnic Sandwiches Are Kept Fresh

SUMMER time is picnic time, and what a delight it is to go off to the beach or a shady spot in the afternoon and just "bum." Of course, dainty sandwiches, deviled eggs, salads, tempting fruits and what-not are a necessary part of the perfect day. They can't be dainty or tempting, however, if care hasn't been taken in the kitchen to see that they are wrapped carefully. Sandwiches are so apt to become dry, as everyone knows but the modern hostess has at her command bags of transparent sheeting which keep the bread from drying out and which retain all the original freshness of the foods, whether it be bread, cake, eggs, salads, pickles or fruit. What a comfort it is, too, to be able to choose your sandwich without having to open the wrapper to see if it be ham, chicken, or cheese, and to know that your tomato or plum, washed in your kitchen at home, is clean and ready to be eaten.

Parental Love Often Carried to Extremes

By Sheilah Graham

"If anything happened to Joan, I'd die." The face of Joan's mother paled as her mind jittered with the dreadful possibility. Sixteen-year-old Joan laughed, but said with a twinge of embarrassment:

"Mother, how absurd you are." A few seconds later Joan suddenly remembered a pressing date with a boy friend and departed. Her mother gazed at her back adoringly and sighed:

"Joan is always going out. I'm afraid she doesn't realize how much I love her, how much she means to me." She was indignant when I said:

"I hope she never does."

"Why how can you say such a thing?" she uttered. "Why shouldn't she?"

"Because the poor gal's life would be smothered in gloom if she did," I replied. "If she realized what would happen to you if anything happened to her she'd be afraid to take a walk for fear a bicycle would run her down. She'd be afraid to swim in case she was attacked with cramps. She'd be afraid to do anything. She'd even be afraid to get married. What right have you to place this burden of fear on her?"

"She is my daughter, isn't she? She is all I love. I love her." Which should have spelt period to the conversation—but it did not.

UNFAIR TO YOUNG

Parents have no right to make themselves emotionally dependent on their children. It's a cruelty to themselves and it isn't fair to the children.

The latter didn't choose their parents, they didn't ask to be brought into the world. They resent a strangling love tie that tries to choke them in the name of parental love.

Without knowing quite why they do it, they have their revenge. With the callous cruelty of the young they get their own back by playing on and stretching that love is far and further than it will go.

I'm wondering what is going to happen to a certain doting divorced father I know when his beloved 15-year-old only daughter is old enough to get herself a husband. There is one thing of which I am sure, and it's this—the sad doting father is going to suffer the tortures of the damned.

To say that he loves the girl is to put it much too mildly. He worships her. She is his sun, moon and stars.

When she has a cold in the head he walks around on tiptoe as though there were a death in the house. When she is off her food he spends hours in delicatessen stores searching for dainties to restore her appetite.

I once heard him telephone her after an absence of one hour. This was his side of the conversation:

"Hello darling, precious. How are you? Thank God . . . I've been thinking of you every minute since I saw you, darling . . . Did you miss me, baby? . . . Now tell me everything you've thought and done . . . Every second will seem like a year until I get home to you. (He was due there in 15 minutes.) . . . Goodbye darling, precious."

Is that lad laying in a store of sadness for himself or isn't he? I hope he won't emulate the example set by the mother of a certain musician who committed suicide the morning after her son was married.

New Buffet Sets

Many of the modern hostesses are now using the ultra-smart short blade knives and forks with plastic composition handles in bone color. These sets are especially attractive for buffet use, but they are being used more and more for regular table settings, especially for luncheons. Of course they need no rubbing or polishing, for the blades are of stainless steel, and the handles a composition material that does not become stained.

Pine-Tar Shampoo Pungent of North Woods Burnishes Dull, Brittle Hair

(POSED BY MARY ASTOR)

By Juliet Shelby

WHERE'S the woman whose hair is none the worse for summer's wear? Sun, sand and sea, to say nothing of winds and perspiration have dried and streaked the hair and a few reconditioning treatments will be a boon to all who want to wear the captivating new berets with the chic they deserve.

If you are trying to see how far you can make the dollar go by all means don't overlook a pomade containing crude oil that will help put back into the scalp oils which the drying suns have thefted. If your hair is thin and lacking in lustre, this is the thing for you. It's an unfailing hair grower and remedy for impoverished tresses.

Men who have been taking daily plunges in the sea, will find this pomade a great little provider for their drying, brittle hair. It is made from crude oil, thrice refined. Your hair is only as healthy and lovely as your scalp will permit. If it is "choked" with dandruff, the pores are clogged. This will cause diminution in the supply of oil and prevent the perspiratory glands from throwing off waste matter.

Simply divide the hair into half-inch parts, and apply the ointment with your fingers all along the partings the night before your shampoo. You'll notice in a short time that life and verve has come back into your tresses.

Speaking of a shampoo, how would you like to know of one made of pine and tar. It is redolent with the clean fresh pungency of pine trees and will bring a gloss and lustre to the hair after just one washing. All you do is to shake the liquid onto the scalp and work up a rich lather with warm water.

To learn more about this scalp pomade and pine-tar shampoo and where they can be bought, phone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Egg Mask for Large Pores

Question: Can you give me the instructions for making and applying the egg pack for large pores? Blondie, Belmont.

Answer: Cleanse your face thoroughly with a cream, and a soap and warm water washing. Beat the white of an egg and apply it to your face. Let it dry. Put a second coating on. Dry. Then cover the white of the egg with the beaten yolk. Let it dry and leave the mask on for at least one hour. Remove with almost hot water and absorbent cotton or soft cloth. If your skin is not oily, massage it lightly with a bit of nourishing cream.

Refining the Pores

Question: Can you tell me of a treatment for whiteheads and enlarged pores? Nothing I have already tried seems to have helped. K. L., Brighton.

Answer: To clear your skin of whiteheads and refine the pores, try this treatment. Soak your skin for at least ten minutes with warm olive oil. Then scrub it with a complexion brush and a rich lather of a soap that cuts oil. Dry and apply a skin tonic. Now use an egg mask:

Beat the white of an egg slightly and paint it thickly on the skin. Let it dry. Put on another coating. Dry. Now apply the beaten yoke and let that dry. Leave this mask on for one hour and remove with hot water and absorbent cotton.

Massage your skin with your finger-tips and, if it is not too oily, use a little nourishing cream.

MAD MILLIONS

By CHARLES GRANT

SYNOPSIS

Lovely, young Cathleen McCarthy tries to discourage the attentions of Seward Ingram, her employer's son because of social barriers, but he insists on seeing her. Seward presents Cathleen with an expensive bracelet. She plans to return it but her shiftless brother, Joe, steals the bracelet and pawns it for $300. Cathleen tries to get an advance on her salary to retrieve the bracelet. Homer Alspaugh, Ingram's confidential secretary, insinuatingly offers her a loan and she is furious. Alspaugh speculates with his employer's money in the hope of securing money to meet his faithless wife's extravagance. Marian Alspaugh is having an affair with the Marques d'Alhues . . . Arline Martin, an actress, tries to induce Ingram to finance a show written by her sweetheart. Ingram refuses and Arline threatens revenge.

CHAPTER XIX

On the couch in Arline Martin's one-room apartment lay Charles Gresham, embryonic playwright, nervously smoking. When he heard Arline's step in the hall, he sprang up. One look at her face, and he knew that her appeal had failed.

She stood in the middle of the room and denounced Ingram.

"Why," she stormed, "he fell for me hard at Grangefields. Said I had everything; said— Oh, I told you the things he said! They're all true, too. I can act, I'm good-looking, I wouldn't fail. He promised me a real chance and now—the dirty welcher—he pretends he's too busy to talk to me—shut me up—kicked me out of his office!"

"You get used to producers lying to you," Gresham said. "Promising the earth one day and the next forgetting they ever heard of you. This Ingram bird has caught their nasty little ways. I was a sap to put any faith in him."

ARLINE VOICES ANGER

He lighted another cigarette and continued his discouraged monologue while Arline, smouldering and silent, flung off her hat and fur.

"Why should a man whose work is honest expect to get anywhere in the American theater today? These stupid managers are right to doubt their own judgments—they haven't any. It's a rotten state of affairs, and the only thing that will ever end it is a revolution. We need a revolution in this country worse than Russia ever did!"

"And the Ingrams would all be stood up against a wall and shot," Arline agreed, her face flaming with savage rage. "Is it really coming, Charlie?"

"Not a chance. There isn't spirit enough in the damned country to run a revolution. The workers are saps and the middle class is doped with catchwords, like freedom and equality. No! The Ingrams are on our backs for life. If we're good slaves, if we please them, we'll be permitted to live and speak our emasculated speeches. Always on the condition of remembering it's through their generosity that we live and breathe."

Arline sat on the arm of the couch and laid her cheek against his hair. What he had said and what she had said made them both feel better, evaporated some of their swelling indignation and relieved the pressure on their spirits. Their words had restored to them their self-conceit—that empty compensation so essential to unsuccessful mediocrity. Thus an equilibrium was re-established and their humiliation and disappointments were balanced by increased belief in themselves.

"If your play were decently produced, it would be a sure-fire hit, honey," Arline assured him. "Some day somebody with brains will read one of your plays and back it—there are people like that—"

"We were sure Ingram was like that, and now see where we're at!"

ACCUSES INGRAM

Arline, inverting the facts as scorned women have inverted them ever since Potiphar's wife set the example, told Gresham. "That time he came to hear the play, you know, I wasn't as easy, as responsive, as he expected!"

"The dirty dog! You never told me he made passes at you," said Charles.

"He didn't get away with anything, the old—"

"Of course not."

Springing up, Charles walked about the room, talking excitedly.

"The dirty bum! Thinks he can have any girl he sees, does he? Barked up the wrong tree when he went after you, eh? Don't you see what we can do to him? By heaven, he deserves it, too, the—"

"Darling, you're crazy. We can't do anything to him."

"Oh, can't we? Ingram made you promises, didn't he? Now he refuses to carry them out, doesn't he? He came to your apartment, tried to—Hell's bells, if we only had a witness to that part of it!"

"We have!" Arline cried. "Seward—his son—burst in at that exact moment, and saw me fighting in his father's arms!"

"Ingram's son? Poof, he'll lie about it!"

"Maybe not. The simp was in love with me himself," said Arline. "Even if he did lie, it wouldn't help him any. A good cross-examiner could twist the truth out of him."

"JUST GOLD DIGGERS"

"I've always thought girls who sued men were just gold diggers," Arline said.

"I know how you feel, feel the same way myself. But it's real money if you win enough to put the play over, to launch us both. You could ask for a hundred thousand—and likely get fifty! Why, it's done all the time! I know a fellow, a lawyer, who says unfavorable publicity is the one thing rich men are afraid of. Most likely Ingram would settle and no one would know a thing about it. We've got to do it, Arline. It's the chance of a lifetime!"

For years, Gresham had struggled and hoped and failed. He had become cynical, desperate. Now, fiercely fighting for a show of success, inviting dishonor for himself and for the girl he loved. The indefiable, unmistakable look of the beaten man came into his face.

It was not hard to convince Arline, who incessantly dreamed of money, that here was a chance to get a large amount, quickly and easily. When he showed her that the insult to her honor demanded reparation, she agreed to his plan.

She flung the white fox stole around her shoulders again, freshened her makeup, and struck an attitude before the long mirror. "Actress Sues Jasper Ingram for Breach of Promise!" she proclaimed. "Oh, boy! I'll be on front page of the tabloids. Take me to that lawyer friend of yours! We'll show Mr. Jasper Ingram something!"

Infanta Josefa wearied by the attentions of those who had never known a court, regretted having come to the United States. Bar Harbor was curious, deferential, and attentive. Her hostess, awed and devoted, gave her a home far more comfortable than any palace the princess had ever inhabited. But it was a long way from the Bartlett's seashore estate to the nearest Catholic church and she longed for the comfort of slipping into her own chapel whenever she felt inclined.

WORLD IN COLORS

The world here was in four colors: blue, green, brown, and grey. Blue sea, green pine-woods, brown sea-weed often lost in a thick grey fog that frightened her—obliterated everything. Dona Josefa missed the Spanish red and yellow. She yearned to settle down in Biarritz, so near to Spain, or on the Cote Vermeil, where she would be within reach of the rest of her family.

These were the reflections that prompted her to write her Major Domo, the Marquis d'Alnues, that she had at last made up her mind to sacrifice her rubies. She instructed him to find her a purchaser at once. "I can not much longer endure life on this frightful savage coast," she wrote. "Today all is dismal gray fog in every direction, worse than in England—it is not air one draws into the lungs, but a choking congealed wetness. A foghorn brays, a bell tolls. It is terrifying and desolating.

The Infanta's rubies were famous. They were enormous and flawless, of the pure pigeon blood—a tiara and dog-collar, so old-fashioned a setting that their beauty was greatly dimmed. A few years' earlier, they might easily have been sold for half a million dollars. Now that market has vanished and when the Marque went to confer with the New York jewelers, he was told that at present, the price was certain to be low.

"The market is glutted. Too many ex-royalties and refugee nobles have had to sell their jewels, and too many rich Americans were ruined by the crash. We advise you to find a private purchaser, Marques."

Accordingly d'Alhues offered the rubies to Laura Ingram.

He did not, naturally, take them with him, but his description of them roused the interest of Jasper Ingram's wife. She had a passion for precious stones, and had already a distinctive collection. But historic rubies, of the color and size described by the Marques made her fairly dizzy. It is not surprising, therefore, that she readily agreed to meet d'Alhues at the bank where she could examine the jewels.

Your Cooking Problems Solved

By MARTHA LEE

Question: "I have not been able to find a recipe for Brambles, would you send me one?"—Mrs. I. P., Chelsea.

Answer:

BRAMBLES

1¾ cups flour
1½ tsps. baking powder
½ cup shortening
¼ cup sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
2 tabsps. milk

Sift the flour and baking powder together. Cream the shortening; stir in the sugar gradually; stir in the unbeaten egg yolk and the vanilla. Stir in about one-fourth of the flour; stir in the milk, then the remainder of the flour. Shape the mixture, pack in ice-box cookie molds, butter cartons, or shape into rolls and wrap in heavy waxed paper and put in the refrigerator to chill. While the mixture is chilling, prepare the filling:

1-3 cup dates, sliced
1-3 cup raisins
1-3 cup figs, sliced.
1 tbsp. honey or light corn syrup
1 tbsp. butter
2 tbsps. orange or lemon juice
¼ cup chopped nuts

Put all of the ingredients except the nuts in a saucepan; stir over low heat until a thick paste is formed: cool, stir in the nuts.

Cut the chilled dough in thin slices. Place a level tablespoon of the filling in the center of each slice; cover with a second slice; press the edges together firmly with the finger tips; prick the top slice with a fork to allow steam and air to escape. With a spatula lift the cookies on to a greased baking sheet. Bake on the top shelf in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) for 10 to 12 minutes.

Question: "Have you a recipe for putting up Tomato Juice that is not very difficult to make?"—Mrs. E. W., Gloucester.

Answer: Use firm ripe tomatoes. Wash, remove stem end and any soft spots. Chop and heat in covered pan until juice flows freely. Strain the juice while hot through a fine sieve, pressing small amount of red pulp through sieve also. Add salt and sugar to taste (about one teaspoon each to a quart of juice). Return the juice to kettle, boil hard for 5 minutes and pour while boiling hot into hot, sterilized jars and seal immediately.

WEEK-END SPECIAL

PREPARE FOR THE INFLUX of guests and casual drop-inners for the last big week-end of the season is at hand. Take advantage of this offer made by one of the chain stores on these beverage items. 12 12-ounce bottles of a dry ginger ale for 75c, usually 87c. The very popular lime rickey, 6 12-ounce bottles 45c, usually 10c a bottle. Two pint or one quart bottles of grape juice, which is an exceptionally good mixer, for 25c. 6 12-ounce bottles club soda for 45c.

ENCHANT YOUR GUESTS with a new hors d'oeuvre cracker. It is small and round and flavored with celery. May be served as it is or as a foundation on which to place some tasty mixture. Comes in a metal container to keep fresh and crisp. A 5-ounce tin sells for 65c.

FRUIT JUICES are enjoying great popularity. So much so that all available fruits are being served in this form. It is now possible to drink the juice of figs. It makes a delicious beverage—good for children and adults. Ideal to serve for the breakfast fruit or as an appetizer. Made of fine fruits and pure sugar syrup. No preservatives or color added whatsoever. A 32-ounce bottle sells for 30c.

TOOTH PICKS HAVE BEEN taken into the living room and now show their appreciation by appearing in bright gay colors. Be sure and have some of these on hand to serve your tiny sausages and pickles. Come in all colors of pure vegetable colorings—red, green, orange, yellow, blue and orchid. 100 for 25c.

WE ALL AGREE that dish washing is the bane of the housewife. But it must be done and done efficiently. We have seen a drainer that will cut down the loss on cracked and chipped dishes. It is made of rubber fused on metal, which will not congeal when treated with hot water. Also makes the process noiseless. Sells for $1.49.

AN AUTOMATIC electric iron which is guaranteed for one year is specially priced at $2.75 at a nearby department store. Guaranteed to do the job efficiently and easily.

IT IS NONE too early to stock up on sandwich spread for the school days which are just ahead. There is a sale of delicious sandwich spread selling at 15c for a half pint. This spread comes in a container made of thin glass with a red stripe around the top, which can be used as a fancy water or beverage glass.

OF ALL THE FAVORITE flavors chocolate is probably the most universal. You find yourself using it continually to please the family. Here is a sale of a famous brand of baking chocolate at 19c a half pound, usually 22c. This is the bar that is deeply marked to separate easily into one ounce squares. An excellent item for the pantry shelf.

NOTICE TO RESTAURANT OR TEA-ROOM owners, or anyone who buys in large quantity. A bottle of Maraschino cherries—the largest we have ever seen—containing four pounds, 9 ounces, is selling now for $1.45.

AN EFFICIENCY EXPERT must have had something to do with developing the new vegetable kettle which we have seen. It is a famous make of aluminum and the cover contains a small strainer at one side so that the pan may simply be tipped with the cover on and all the liquid drained from the vegetable with one motion of the hand. Quick and easy to use. Sells for $1.59. This same make of aluminum is having a special sale—set of 3 saucepans for $1.79, a double-lip fry pan $1.00, a two-quart double boiler for $1.79 and a very useful pan with a rack which can be used as a roasting or baking pan or a grill sells for $1.49.

Kellogg's CORN FLAKES
The Season's BIG VALUE

Tempting Summer Platter for Good Appetites

From Martha Lee's Tuesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

After a bowl of hot chicken soup has toned up the muscles of the stomach and whetted he appetite at the beginning of the meal, a cold summer platter supplies just the kind of food for late summer appetites.

Variety is what most families crave. Regardless of the fact that we are told we could not only live but actually be 100 per cent well on an extremely simple diet, we are constantly searching for something new and different. Here is perhaps the secret of the popularity of the buffet in many a well-patronized tea room or restaurant.

HOME SIZE BUFFET

The summer platter can be a sort of home size buffet. Enough hard cooked eggs so that each diner may have three or four halves make the foundation of the platter. Cut the eggs into halves lengthwise, remove the yolks, mash and season them. A bit of horse-radish, or mustard, or chili sauce, or piquant French dressing, or plain mayonnaise blended with the yolk does wonders for flavor.

When the eggs have been stuffed and chilled, arrange them on a bed of crisp salad greens. Around the edge garnish generously with small, rather thick pie-shaped pieces of cheese, slender fingers of cold ham, and radish roses. Potato salad goes well with such a platter.

On a slice of toast arrange a thin slice of broiled ham. On the ham put a slice of Gruyere cheese. Set this into the oven or under the broiler for the cheese to melt while you fry or poach an egg. Put the egg on top of the cheese and serve hot. Accompany the sandwich with crisp cole slaw and radish roses to make a perfect luncheon.

Tomato jelly ring filled with egg and cucumber salad is refreshing to the palate and to the eye. With cheese sandwiches it is excellent.

TOMATO JELLY RINGS

2 cups tomato juice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 bay leaf
2½ tablespoons gelatin
½ teaspoon minced onion
2 teaspoons vinegar
½teaspoon sugar

Soften the gelatin in ¼ cup of the tomato juice. Heat the remaining tomato juice, onions and seasonings to the boiling point and let simmer for five minutes. Dissolve the gelatin in it and strain into ring molds, which have been rinsed with cold water. Set into refrigerator to congeal. When ready to serve unmold on bed of lettuce and fill with egg-cucumber salad.

EGG-CUCUMBER SALAD

4 hard cooked eggs, diced
1 small cucumber, diced
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper.
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¾ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing

Combine all ingredients, folding in the mayonnaise last. Chill and fill into tomato jelly rings.

"Fan my brow, Tillie—

I've just finished cooking the dinner"

FOR most women with old stoves . . cooking the daily dinner in these dog days of August is nothing short of an endurance contest. If one of your ancestors happened to be a steamship stoker, maybe you can stand the gaff. Otherwise, the heat is apt to floor you.

And, yet, men have to eat! Meals must be prepared! The show must go on.

Why not change to electric cooking and be cool. Three things make electric cooking definitely, measurably cooler: (1) It is flameless; (2) Modern electric ranges are perfectly insulated to keep heat in; (3) Much of the time in electric cooking — the current is off.

Coolness is only one part of the electric cooking story. Come in to your Edison Shop and learn the other reasons (economy, cleanliness, speed, and efficiency) why you should cook electrically — NOW!

MAJOR AWARDS FOR NEWS TIPS GO TO WOMEN

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

Alert women, who recognized good news stories, are the winners of the two major awards in the weekly news tip contest, while three other women win minor awards.

When bandits made an unsuccessful attempt to deprive 75 employes of the American Shoe Company of their weekly salaries, Mrs. Annie Snyder, of Second street, Framingham, ran for the nearest telephone.

"Liberty 4000."

Then she gave the news tip editor the first information about the attempted holdup and the methods used to frustrate the bandits. She wins the $25 first prize.

BABY TIP IS WINNER

A human interest story—an abandoned baby—grips the attention of every reader. Charles McCarthy of Commonwealth avenue, Allston, was aware of that fact so he called the news tip editor to inform him that an eight-months-old baby boy had been found in the bushes surrounding Leverett Pond, Brookline. He wins the $10 second prize.

Ellen Carty of Parkhurst street, Quincy, wins the $5 third prize for the tip on the sudden death of the Rev. Patrick Drennan in Bryant street, Dedham.

REWARDS OF $1

Swampscott woman for tip on girl killed by an automobile.

Anna Mooney, Stoney Beach Hull, for tip on three boys rescued from leaking craft by Coast Guard.

Gertrude Kaplan, 38 Neptune street, Lynn, for a tip on sudden death of a man in a Lynn restaurant.

Clerk Collapses in New Haven Yard

Deserter Hides 15 Years

Riga, Latvia, Aug. 28—After hiding 15 years in a room of his brother's house, Kaspar Hauser was discovered and arrested as a deserter. Bent from confinement, Hauser, 40, looks 60, and was hardly able to walk, lacking exercise. Relatives had believed him shot down, a war hero.

Pay Day After Long Years

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Eighteen thousand Chicago school teachers collected fifteen hundred dollars each yesterday and started out to see the city.

They had seen the city before. But only on foot.

Four thousand other city employes got the same amount, which made twenty-six million dollars in all.

That's a king's ransom. And you can throw in the queen and the crown prince.

The girls are going to buy pretty dresses, fancy shoes and funny hats. That's the biggest story in Chicago since the big fire.

LAWYER MOVES FOR PRESTIGE

By Associated Press

Milwaukee, Aug. 28—The American bar was urged today to discard methods tending to lower its prestige.

The plea came from Robert H. Jackson, assistant General Counsel of the U. S. Treasury Department, speaking to a conference of the American Bar Association, which opened its convention here today.

Jackson suggested no extensive use of disbarment proceedings or other proceses of the legal code to remove from the profession those guilty of besmirching its name. Rather, he asked the bar itself, through its thousands of members, to make the choice between "leaders or mouthpieces."

"It is hard to escape the conclusion that if the bar has lost its ancient prestige," Jackson said, "it has not been lost by scoundrels and dunces who never had any part of it to lose, but by lawyers of substance, who lost it, not because they failed to observe the lawyers' code, but because the code itself had lost credit."

Activities of lawyers in criminal law have done much to lower the profession, he said.

"One reason is that, while we are strongly opposed to crime in the abstract, we will never give organized support to any specific proposal to suppress it."

TEACHER HELD IN AUTO DEATH

Newburyport, Aug. 28—Charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Charles F. Eaton, 66, of Middle street, Newburyport, Charles F. Janvrin, 53, principal of the Seabroook, N. H., junior high school was under arrest today.

According to Roy B. Chase, inspector of motor vehicles, Janvrin was the driver of the car that killed Eaton on the Lafayette Highway, near Salisbury beach.

Both Janvrin, and Harold Cahoon, 28, of Hampton Beach, N. H. with the former at the time of the accident, are alleged to have denied driving the car. Chase, however, calmed he had reason to believe that Eaton was struck while walking on the highway.

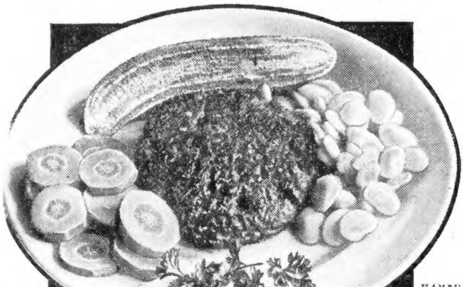
Waldorf AT THE SIGN OF THE RED APPLE

We hear it everywhere..."I never knew a BROILED BANANA would taste so good!"



HAMBURG STEAK and BANANA GRILL: Hamburg Steak, Grilled Banana, Buttered Carrots, New Lima Beans, Rolls and Butter 25c

. . . HARDLY A WALDORF RESTAURANT IN New England, eighty-six of them, but has been reporting to me the enthusiastic comments of hundreds of delighted customers who have relished these new banana dishes which we have been serving.

- It just goes to show that most of us never have realized before what a delicious and energy-giving part of our diet we may have been neglecting. I am sure I never did . . . I agree with thousands who are saying, "I never knew a broiled banana would taste so good!"
- This Tuesday we have still more banana "specials." The two we are featuring are particularly delicious, and I hope you order at least one.
- The main "special" is a Hamburg Steak and Banana Grill, consisting of the tenderest sort of hamburg with a grilled banana, garnished with buttered carrots and new lima beans, and served with the usual dainty rolls and butter. The dessert "special" is a Banana Melba Tart . . . fully ripened sliced bananas on a flaky tart which has a lemon filling. If I am any judge of people's taste, this is a dessert that will capture the fancy of thousands for it is a new flavor! Try them . . . see if I am not right!

GODDARD PLANS 'STRATO' ROCKET

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The beach is a good clock. With it you need no other time-piece. And I am not talking about the tide, either. After a few days, of course, you catch the rhythm of the tide and know in a general way when your beach will be a little strip in front of your steps and when it will be a wide shining stretch of damp sand.

Robert E. Roger

But the conjunction of beach and sea and human beings gives you a horologe, which has no minute or second hand but which works well enough for everybody who is not living in an atmosphere of business appointments or classes meeting or radio programs. This horologe, so far as I know, does not exist in the busy village, where many people are spending a summer reproducing their winter social and business activities. Nor does it exist in the fields or in the mountains. Only where people live on the beach and for it, does it work.

I do not know how the beach looks before 9 a. m.—nor does any one else, so far as I can see. At nine in the morning it shines wetly in the sun, solitary, lonely, primitive, Nature unbothered by man.

The sand-peeps are out in force, picking what nourishment they may find along the weedy margin of the tide. The swallows, twilight birds, are not up yet. Down the line, in front of a cottage, an old and scowling spaniel, having slept himself out, waits silent at the front door for the little boy who will wake up both house and beach. My own tethered pup—not a pup really but a somewhat nervous spinster of five summers—tugs at her leash hither and yon making sure the beach has not been revolutionized over night.

By the time breakfast is over, family life has transferred to the sands, with chairs and umbrella, pails and spades, innumerable children and considerable dogs, for a long morning. Bathing is sporadic, quick and intermittent dashes but no serious and determined soaking. A great deal of dozing in near-nudity, even as in Eden and quite as innocently, an extreme air of negligence as to whether beds are made or floors swept or dishes washed.

One tells the coming of noon, not by the sun in the zenith—we are all too mechanized for that ancient wisdom—but by the sudden and simultaneous disappearance of everybody into the houses. Of a sudden the beach is deserted and gay umbrellas, deck chairs, rugs, and other disjecta membra of vacationing humaning testify that though human life is interrupted it has not yet abdicated. But almost immediate the youngsters are out again. The indications are that they have eaten standing up, their loins girded, like the Jews on the first Passover, and with a "piece in hand," like the X, Y, Z, and of the old Mother Goose rhyme about the Apple Pie. Frequently they emerge still gobbling. The elders are more leisurely and one does not see them again for a while. Housework may be indicated, naps more probably.

As the sun westerns and the shoals shine white on the horizon, everybody is out, everybody is bathing, racing, boxing, playing baseball on the edge of the ebbing or flowing tide. The young boys roughhouse by themselves and the girls vacationing stroll by themselves, pretending they prefer their own sex.

The sun sinks and the women folk disappear. The youngsters still keep at it, going in reluctantly when called. The beach is empty save for a new and sparse group of bathers, fathers home late by car or railroad, big sister home with father from her office—folks who never see the ocean save when it is graying and cooling, when there is no longer sun to redden the white flesh, when the waves grow swiftly darker and mother calls them in for supper. In the afterglow the sky grows opal, the sands mauve, orchid, and purple. In the west streaks of red fade imperceptibly and to the east the Shoals lighthouse suddenly gleams briefly like a hard white diamond point against the all but vanished shadow of the five islands that Celia Thaxter knew.

One eats by artificial light, and when one strolls out again night is upon us and a rising wind, and the day-long line of surf begins to shine ghostly-white with phosphoresence—at least until the moon rises to dim that weird light and blot out the stars. There are no more dogs, there are no more children. The parents stay snug indoors with the evening paper or the social bridge, and the only moving things on the beach are those shadowing, strolling figures in couples—the boys and girls who played separately under the sun but who under the moon or the moonless mist creep together for reasons which only the moon and the mist know.

In the dark the beach horologe ticks on with the creeping tide and the endless, timeless sound of the surf. The night tells no time.

ELY TO SPEAK OVER RADIO FOR COLE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Governor Ely will make his second speech in the governorship campaign for General Charles H. Cole tomorrow night. At 7 p. m. he will deliver an address over the radio from Station WNAC.

In view of the prominence given to the American Liberty League formation, the governor is expected to state his position in connection with this movement, alleged to be hostile to the New Deal. The governor denied a report that he would head the New England division of the League. He may take the opportunity to further stress that fact.

It is also understood that the governor will again "go after" former Mayor James M. Curley on the issue of the Worcester "bossed" convention.

CURLEY DEFINES ISSUE

The former mayor at rallies in Lynn, South Medford, Fall River and South Boston, reiterated that the issue of the campaign remains whether the people shall choose the candidates themselvs or have them hand picked by the party bosses. Former Mayor Curley declared:

"At this stage of every campaign there is always a tendency for issues to become clouded, and for the public mind to become confused. Fortunately for the future of Democracy in this state and for the continued success of the Roosevelt humanitarian progress throughout the nation, the one dominant issue in Massachusetts still holds itself free from irrelevant matters. All efforts to side-track it have failed.

"The issue that confronts the Democrats of our state on primary day is exactly the same today that I was when the Worcester convention insisted on endorsing a candidate whose name was not even suggested up to the night before the convention.

CALLS SELF "UNBOSSED"

"The issue is whether the people are to make the choice in their candidate for governor, or whether they are to have a candidate selected for them by leaders whose personal interest does not run current with that of the people.

"The Democratic party of Massachusetts, always independent in thought and action, will decide on primary day whether they wish to nominate a 'bossed' or an 'unbossed' candidate for governor. My opponent is the 'bossed' candidate and I offer myself as the 'unbossed' candidate of our party.

"It is a simple issue, one that will not be tossed aside and an issue that means everything to the liberty-loving citizens who dominate the democracy of Massachusetts."

Curley speaks this afternoon at Brant Rock, over the radio, and at night in Roxbury, Melrose, Wakefield, Reading and Lowell.

COLE FLAYS BACON

General Cole, speaking in Dedham and Cambridge, answering the charge of Lieutenant Governor Gaspar G. Bacon, G. O. P. candidate for governor, that he has not talked issues, asserted that he has been campaigning on the New Deal and returning prosperity, the "only real issue of the campaign."

Cole stated that Bacon has been attacking the New Deal because, regardless of his private personal opinion, he must critise it.

"Otherwise it would be an admission by the Republican party that the New Deal has been a success, and since it is strictly a Democratic program, the achievement of President Roosevelt, Republians who for four long years tried ineffectively to restore business, would have no pretense for seeking election to office."

MORE ARRESTS LOOM IN DOLE FRAUD PROBE

With two arrests for fraud already made, investigation of the city's welfare recipients was being pushed today and further arrests were expected.

A South Boston couple, alleged to have illegally received more than $1500 from the city during the past two years, were under arrest, following the discovery that they owned two three-family apartment houses and had recently bought a truck.

EARNED $25 WEEKLY

According to police Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Vento, of East Second street, South Boston, have been receiving $15 weekly for two years, although Vento is employed at the General Alloys Foundry and receives rental from his apartments.

Despite the fact that he was excused from work by a city doctor, because of three amputated fingers, Vento has been paid an average of $25 a week at the foundry for difficult labor, police say.

It was also charged that Vento bought a truck last May, and continued to collect welfare aid following the purchase.

EAST BOSTON MAN HELD

The couple were arrested at headquarters on a charge of theft of $96 in money and groceries from the welfare department.

Also under custody today was John Zimpolo, of Bremen street, East Boston, charged with larceny of $36 from the department.

It is alleged he had marked his welfare card with a counterfeit stamp to prove he had worked at the welfare yards in East Boston. According to investigators he did not work there.

VACATIONISTS FACE TAXES

Out of town residents, who summer at Nahant, will pay personal taxes in the future, if it is possible to make them do so, it was agreed at a special town meeting at which $1500 was voted as counsel fees to take the matter into the courts.

The great majority of these residents have been avoiding taxes by claiming they make the payments in other communities, according to officials at the meeting.

An order banning the digging of clams on the Nahant water front without a permit from the selectmen, was also adopted at the meeting. Residents of the town will be the only ones granted permits.

Another ordinance was passed calling for the numbering of all residences in Nahant and the sum of $1200 was voted for highway work.

It was predicted at the meeting that the tax rate for this year will be in the vicinity of $40. The present rate is $34.50.

Davis Hardware Manager Honored

A gathering of more than 100 friends attended a dinner at the Hotel Westminster in honor of Oscar Spear, manager of the Davis Hardware Stores, 124 Summer street, Boston.

Mr. Spear was honored in anticipation of his coming marriage to Miss Sylvia Lakien, graduate of McGill University, Montreal. Joe Umans was master of ceremonies.

[illegible] VENTO MRS. ANTHONY VENTO

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Vento, above, faced charges of fraud in connection with the welfare inquiry in court today. They were arrested last night after welfare investigators declared that they had received $15 weekly, despite the fact that they were owners of two houses. 5 STILL HELD IN HORAN DEATH

Five suspects, one of whom stands accused of having taken $300 as his share in the robbery and murder of John J. Horan, were behind the bars today.

This suspect quintet was held after a night of intensive activity, during which police grilled 15 men until 2 a. m., finally releasing most of them.

They were, however, convinced today that definite progress had been made, and it was planned to question a waitress thought to have "tipped off" the bandits to the fact that Horan had $800 hidden in his trunk in his Massachusetts avenue, South End room.

The information to the effect that one of the suspects was paid off with the $300 for his part in Horan's death, tied in with the suspicion that the waitress had given the "tip" wittingly or unwittingly, police admitted.

HIRD, AS ALIEN, MUST REGISTER

The strange legal tangle involving Malcolm Hird, 27, of Westglow street, Dorchester, a registered Boston voter now in this country on a 90 day parole, because he is unable to prove legal entry, was slowly being straightened out today.

As his first step to become a citizen of this country, Hird was due to register today as an alien with the immigration bureau.

Later a hearing will be held to prove that he and his sister, Florence, entered the country prior to 1921 and that both are of good character, necessary procedure under the immigration laws.

Hird's first knowledge that he was not a legal citizen of the United States came when he was detained at the Canadian border when returning from a vacation there.

SECRETS OF AIR NEW GOAL OF PROFESSOR

Worcester, Aug. 28—Prof. Robert H. Goddard, of Clark University, internationally famous because of his experiments with rockets, today announced he would begin work next month on the construction of a rocket which he hopes will pierce the mysteries of the stratosphere and record scientific data.

Prof. Goddard, granted a leave of absence from Clark University for a year, will go directly to Roswell, N. M., where his base will be set up.

GRANT AIDS PLAN

A grant from the Guggenheim Foundation made possible the experiment.

Prof. Goddard, in revealing plans today indicated that his new rocket will be unlike the rocket he constructed a few years ago.

His new experimental rocket will be composed of a special processed light metal, and capable of standing considerable pressure.

On the tip of the rocket a parachute will be placed which will open as soon as the rocket has reached its height. This will enable the rocket to make scientific recordings while descending, according to Prof. Goddard.

TO BUILD TOWER

The professor stated that a tower 60 feet high and shaped like an elevator well will be used as a basis from which to send the rocket soaring into the upper levels.

Just what speed the rocket will attain the professor could not determine at present, but it will travel at least 40 to [illegible] miles above the earth's surface, he said.

The Clark University scientist believes he will be successful in obtaining data from his rocket experiment which will be of great value to future aeronautics.

SCHOOL DAYS DRAW NEAR

Greater Boston school children were wearing long faces today as they realized that the unfailing approach of school was upon them. Tentative opening dates have already been announced by many communities as follows:

Boston, Sept. 11; Cambridge, Sept. 12; Somerville, Sept. [illegible]; Quincy, Sept. 5; Chelsea, Sept. 5; Revere, Sept. 10; Winthrop, Sept. 5; Everett, Sept. 5; Malden, Sept. 5; Medford, Sept. 11; Melrose, Sept. 1[illegible]; Milton, Sept. 5; Brookline, Sept. 1[illegible]; Waltham, Sept. 11; Newton, Sept. 10; Watertown, Sept. 11; Belmont, Sept. 1[illegible]; Wellesley, Sept. 11; Needham, Sept. 5; Wakefield, Sept. 5; Stoneham, Sept. 5; Reading, Sept. 5; Woburn, Sept. 5 or 13; Dedham, Sept. 11; Arlington, Sept. 10; Lynn, Sept. 10 or 24; Lexington, Sept. 10; Concord, Sept. 5.

Due to the Jewish New Year, Cambridge schools will not open until Sept. 12, while Chelsea and Revere are also expected to postpone their openings.

Air Mail Rates Cut to 6 Cents

Announcing the lowest air mail rates ever offered, Postmaster W. E. Hurley said that under the new schedule a six-cent stamp would insure delivery of a letter from Boston in San Francisco within 48 hours.

A heavy increase in the use of air mail is expected since the new rate is only double that for ordinary service which takes five days.

De luxe liners have been shorn of much of their swank by the passengers themselves. Indeed, the majority of the travelers who used to occupy royal suites with maids, valets and even personal physicians are now crossing in one cabin boats. And without the usual mountainous piles of luggage. Not many take trunks at all—just hand luggage. It's getting smart to look tacky on ocean voyages.

Near Long Beach last evening I stopped at one of those "Man Buried Alive" exhibits ballyhooed along the road. For 15 cents one stepped into a pup tent and gazed through a makeshift funnel at the wan face below. "Talk to him!" said the exhibitionist. So falteringly and in a high squeak I inquired: "Are you all right?" He replied "O. K." and conversation ended. He had been underground 21 days and hoped to make it 93.

Ed Howe, fleeing the Kansas drouth by motoring to the Pacific finds he still has a job at 81, although he quit at 80. A national weekly decided he was too young to retire and pursued him until he finally with a sigh signed up. However, one thing he insisted upon and that was his right to select a title. It was granted and this is it: "About Nothing by Nobody." H. L. Mencken has called Howe's writings the highest example of simple, concise and expressive English.

Ed Howe, writing from Atchison; William Allen White from Emporia, and Robert Quillen from the even smaller community of Fountain Inn, S. C., are generous proof that a thorouugh-going writer does not have to get out of his bailiwick to catch the eye of the metropolitan editor. The worthy trumpetings are always heard. Without agents, personal contact or editorial shop influence Howe, White and Quillen are only three of many writers in the somewhat obscure outposts who command the immediate sanctum ear.

The most confusing mixup of screen personalities—and it makes each bite nails and let down their hair—is between Warren Williams and Warner Baxter. Among a dozen people who do now know them personally, eight will almost invariably call one by the name of the other. Similarity of names and looks does it. The only possible remedy is for one to change his name and there dislike is too mutual, I suppose, for either to make the step. A similar confusion, although not from the standpoint of nomenclature, has existed between Fannie Hurst and Edna Ferber. Many careful readers will, after a short lapse, credit the story of one to the other. Likely because each has written extravagantly of Jewish family life.

Such a paragraph as this is so easy to fake. I have hesitated for several weeks to print it. At least until I could find the evidence. Members of my family saw it but it was thrown out as unimportant. Anyway 10 days before the Dillinger episode a postcard from a town in Illinois—Streator, as I recall—read: "They'll get Dillinger in Chi shortly if you want a scoop." The "get" was in quotations. And it was signed "A Moll."

I know how the petulant gentleman felt who, missing eternity by an eyelash under a taxi, screamed at the driver: "Ring your horn." Most of us jabberwock that way in sudden fright.

BLAST SETS GAS FIRE IN TRENCH

Newton firemen today battled a 15-foot wall of flame for 30 minutes when a dynamite blast broke a gas main at Commonwealth avenue and Washington street, West Newton.

Street department workers had excavated a 75-foot ditch for a sewer, and had used dynamite to break down an impeding ledge.

COUNCIL SEEKS HEROINE FUND

Compensation for the death of Mary [illegible], drowned off G street, South Boston, when saving her younger brother, was sought by the city council.

The council, acting on the suggestion of City Councillor John E. Kerrigan requested the city law department to file a bill with the next legislature asking the city to compensate the mother of the drowned child.

It was also demanded that the South Boston beach front be supplied with lifebuoys and markers, warning of the danger spots.

Phone in News Tips to the Boston American and Advertiser — Win $50 Weekly in Prizes

Do you want to make some money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American and the Sunday Advertiser are presenting the opportunity. Every week a total of $50 in prizes will be given for news tips telephoned in to the News Tip Editor at Liberty 4000. And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an important meeting is scheduled for a certain date, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger, that a celebrity is coming to town? That's a news tip. There will be given $25 weekly for the best first exclusive news tip received, $10 for the next best and $1 prizes for each of the fifteen next most valuable news tips. This offer is now in effect. Remember that SPEED is the watchword. First to the telephone with the news wins the award. News tips mean money.

Stock Market Has Fallen Into Habit of Sleep Walking

Utilities again turned tired and showed no signs getting a second wind and resuming their upturn and from the way some of them went down, notably North American, the movement appears to have been purely speculative of the hit and run variety rather than the long-term type

We continue to await a test [illegible] belief nothing in the recent rise genuinely testifies to the inauguration of an authentic reversal of the downtrend.

Traders complain of the difficulty to dispose of stocks. In one instance 100 shares of Union Pacific were offered at 104 immediately after the stock had opened at 104½. There was no bid at this level, but at 103 there was a bid for 200 shares which when filled found the next bid at 10[illegible]

This situation has prevailed for more than a week and therefore is making cautious traders wonder about how much short selling could have taken place during the rise, since long selling orders must be cleaned up before the short order is executed

One of the peculiarities of the rise witnessed from mid-August is [illegible] shares. Almost without exception they have [illegible] the rest of the list. BONDS PRESENT HARD TASK FOR TREASURY

(In the next months the government will borrow nearly two billion dolars. Herewith is the second of three articles by M. L. Ramsay, Universal Service specialist on financial and economic subjects, analyzing and explaining this federal financing which will be a dominant factor in banking, the investment markets and business.)

By M. L. RAMSAY
Universal Service

Washington Aug 28—Almost any day now Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and his [illegible] expert aides will put their [illegible] for as audacious [illegible] a feat of responsible guessing as the government and the financial world have seen in many a moon

They must forecast how eager the most critical and hard-boiled buyers of investment securities in [illegible] will be to purchase [illegible] bonds notes or certificates [illegible] day and hour early next month, what interest rates will tempt them, and how little interest the government can safely offer.

Will these critical investors continue to lend, for 10 to 12 years, at [illegible] three and a quarter per [illegible] will they demand more, [illegible] only sparingly if they fail [illegible]

[illegible] questions must be answered [illegible] Treasury from two to four days before the final and irrevocable answers are given by [illegible] banks and investors. It takes [illegible] to notify Federal Reserve banks and branches throughout the country, prepare and distribute circulars, and get all the machinery set before public announcement is made of new loans.

And the Morgenthau group must [illegible] measure stake upon its [illegible] guess the credit of the government, at a time when that credit finances virtually all relief and recovery, and largely supports the public and private financial structure of the country.

More "inside" reports on the market's condition and temper [illegible] all Wall Street's dopesters together could assemble, and more [illegible] of past performances than a system player at the race tracks would dream of, will be available to guide decisions.

[illegible] financial lore can not foretell precisely the course of the securities markets, and this time, with currencies cutting up and Wall Street more interested [illegible] moves the Treasury [illegible] than in the cautious [illegible] made, judgment and [illegible] estimates are at a premium.

By the recent pattern, Morgenthau can expect the national banks to buy well over half [illegible] securities he offers. They will [illegible] mostly for investment, but [illegible] for resale. Corporations will [illegible] his second best customers, followed in order by private investors, Federal reserve banks and insurance companies.

Many of the new securities likely to be exchanged for the 1246 [illegible] dollars of Liberty Loan bonds payable October 15 will go to a multitude of small investors.

(The third and concluding article on government borrowing will be published tomorrow.)

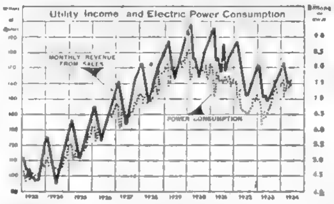
Utility Income



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart shows the course of power consumption and utility earnings. The general public, the government, holders of utility stocks and the managements of our utilities are vitally interested in these two lines, and are more concerned today about their future than they have been at any other time in the past.

There is little doubt but that the line of power consumption will continue its vigorous upward trend as soon as business is back on its legs once more. There has been an enormous increase in the use of household electrical appliances, even during the years of the depression.

In the second place, many of the private utilities are conducting vigorous campaigns to increase the use of power by domestic consumers. Finally, we have the government, which has its own particular reasons for encouraging an increase in the consumption of electricity. It is professedly constructing vast power projects largely for the purpose of reducing the cost of electricity to the consumer, and increasing the amount which he can conveniently use within his present income.

Thus, the city of Tupelo, Miss., the first to sign a contract for the distribution of power with the Tennessee Valley Authority, has reduced the cost of a kilowatt hour to 1.34 cents. This may be compared with an average cost throughout the country of five cents per k. w. h. Under the stimulus of such exceptional and perhaps, on a true cost basis, unwarranted rates, power consumption is bound to increase.

It is the effect upon the earnings of utilities of such stimuli to consumption which is causing concern. A survey conducted in the state of New York in 1930 showed that the cost of distributing power was approximately two cents per k. w. h.

Live News of Today's Market Leaders

With stock transactions on the New York Stock Exchange so far this month approximately 14,000,000 shares, there is a good chance that August will provide a new record for dullness. Assuming that the aggregate turnover this month will be about 17,000,000 shares, the total would be the lowest since May, 1924, when 13,587,832 shares changed hands.

Plan Moves in Face of Complications

Though Associated Gas & Electric Company debentures sell at what the financial community calls "a receivership basis," brokerage houses have expressed admiration at the manner in which every attack and suit against the company during its long readjustment difficulties has been defeated.

In the June 30 balance sheet it was revealed that more than $140,000,000 of its debentures had been deposited for its plan of rearrangement of debt capitalization, a complicated scheme involving issuance in some cases of fixed interest bearing debentures and in others of cumulative interest bearing income debentures.

Printing Press Inflation Rumored

"Real printing press inflation," the Pacific Coast is informed by a Washington correspondent, will come about next March. No guarantees accompanied the information.

Cash Accounts and Preferred Stocks

Customers who are the owners of preferred stocks on which dividends are not paid, though earned, have queried their brokers recently as to why their companies seem to have more working capital in the form of cash than business warrants. It is reported confidently that in the case of several preferred issues, where part of the dividend is being paid, the corporations have been buying their own preferred stocks at a huge discount from par value. Though this is advantageous to the common shareholders, the preferred holders are not taking very kindly to it, their brokers report.

Processing Tax on Rye Discussed

Western sources report growing discussion of the possibility of a processing tax being established on rye.

Cuban Trade Treaty a Shipping Omen

Now that the Roosevelt administration has achieved its first tariff rate cutting treaty, shipping stocks may be expected to receive attention on the prospect that ocean traffic will increase—in the opinion of some brokers. Gossip in shipping offices indicates that it is expected the administration will attempt to extend the idea of reciprocal tariff treaties to other Latin American countries. As the success of the policy would increase cargoes in both directions, thereby reducing overhead operating costs, it is easy to understand why the news was received enthusiastically by maritime interests.

Santa Fe City Bond Settlement

Buying of City of Santa Fe Argentina, 7s, 1945, has come from South America recently on the theory that payment of interest October 1 may be made on the same basis as the settlement reached regarding Province of Santa Fe 7s, 1942, a few months ago. That settlement gave Province bondholders a 4 per cent rate.

STEEL MERGER APPROVED BY DIRECTORS

One of the largest consolidations of prominent steel companies undertaken in several years, involving the Republic Steel Corporation, the third largest producer in the country, and the important properties of the Corrigan, McKinney Steel Company was approved at meetings of the boards of directors of both companies held yesterday, August 27, subject to ratification by the stockholders.

Details of the terms and other essential factors in the plan were announced jointly by T. M. Girdler, chairman of Republic, and Donald B. Gillies, president of Corrigan, McKinney.

Republic's plans also contemplate readjustment of the corporation's capital structure and $24,000,000 of new financing for the combined companies.

The enlarged enterprise, which is a demonstration of the faith of Republic's management in the future of the industry, will have assets of approximately $323,000,000, and a combined steel ingot producing capacity of approximately 6,000,000 tons annually.

Republic Steel corporation directors simultaneously entered into an agreement with leading executives and directors of Truscon Steel Co. under which the latter will accept securities of Republic Steel Corporation in exchange for their Truscon holdings, after consummation of the acquisition of the Corrigan, McKinney properties. This offer, on similar terms, is open to all Truscon stockholders, but is contingent upon acceptance by holders of 75 per cent of Truscon stock.

The banking firms which have co-operated with the corporations in preparation of the plan are Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Field, Glore & Co.

The essential features of the proposed changes in Republic's capital structure, in addition to its simplification, are that they will eliminate all dividend arrears on the outstanding preferred stock, reduce the amount of the preferred stock outstanding; permit $24,000,000 of new financing, the proceeds of which will be used to retire the present outstanding refunding and general mortgage, repay existing bank loans, and provide additional working capital for the consolidated properties.

These steps, in the opinion of the directors, will place both the preferred and common stockholders of Republic Steel Corporation in a more advantageous position in respect to further earnings of the company than under the existing capital setup. They will also be more adapted to the present and future requirements of the enlarged corporation.

A special stockholders' meeting of Republic Steel Corporation has been called for October 30, 1934, at which stockholders of record at the close of business October 6 will have the right to vote.

Each of the proposals to be submitted to stockholders for their approval at the special meeting is an integral part of the plan as a whole, and no one proposal can be carried out unless all are ratified.

Western Maryland Reports Surplus

Western Maryland Railway reports for seven months ended July 31, 1934, surplus of $568,828 after taxes and charges, equal to $3.20 a share on the 177,420 shares of 7 per cent first preferred stock on which no dividends have been paid. This compares with $197,822 or $1.11 a share on the first preferred stock in the seven months ended July 31, 1933.

Unexpected Gain in Retail Trade Found in Report

Running contrary to the expected trend, the day-by-day comparisons with a year ago reveal an increase in retail sales thus far in August, with volume for the past week topping that of the week preceding by 3 to 5 per cent, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

The outlook for retailers has turned distinctly brighter during the last two weeks, as stocks of Summer merchandise have been about cleared, particularly in country districts, where farmers are in daily receipts of cash from their freshly-gathered harvests.

Besides, the higher prices being received for grains, livestock, and other farm products are expected to lift Fall sales fully 15 to 2[illegible] per cent above the totals recorded in 1933.

A noteworthy change during the week was the brighter view of the future taken by workers in industrial centers, where opening of deferred payment accounts exceeded the number at this period last year by nearly 100 per cent.

Retail trade during the week was stimulated not only by the slightly cooler temperatures in many parts of the country and the increased attention given the August promotional events, but much of the enlarged volume was due to the assemblage of clothing and accessories in preparation for Fall terms of schools and colleges.

Favored by the rise in the price of cotton, August white sales have turned out well, as extra supplies are being accumulated of sheets, pillowcases, tablecloths, and dish towels, muslins, and cotton yard goods, as protection against possible price rises later in the season.

Stocks of novelty Summer footwear have been about cleared by the special sales, even though mark-downs were not so wide as expected, because of the higher trend which leather quotations have taken.

In the men's clothing departments, it was the white linen suits, tropical worsted suits, sport coats, and plain and patterned flannel trousers and slacks which sold in the largest number, although some attention was accorded the early showings of Fall merchandise.

Judging from the generous response which is being given August fur promotions, women were preparing for a long cold winter even before the weather forecasters came out with an official announcement to that effect.

The nationalization of silver has done more than to expand the currency issue, for it has brought a renewed interest in silver plate. It is estimated that more silverware has been sold during the past two weeks than during any comparative period in more than a year.

Purchases have not been confined to plated silverware, but have extended to solid silver tea and coffee services, vases, ash trays, and an imposing array of decorative articles.

Stock Market Time Table

10-11—Following a mild reception at the opening trading turned dull. Metals were easy. Fractional losses prevailed for the most part. Trading volume amounted to 120,000 shares.

11-12—Prices held steady in second hour dullness. Gold Miners were heavy. Mild demand for distillers' issues improved the appearance of the list around noon. Transactions approximated 200,000 shares.

HECKSCHER ON SAVING OF AMERICA

By B. C. FORBES

A gentleman who has lived long, achieved notably, given much, August Heckscher—86 this week—writes this column emphasizing the need for nurturing rather than kicking and cuffing business confidence.

B. C. Forbes

"We still," he says, "worship the golden calf. We disregard the fact that all the gold in the world will not buy a loaf of bread or a glass of water on a barren island in mid-ocean.

"Concurrently, we have belabored that noble old gentleman who goes by many aliases, including credit and co-operation, with fists and feet until he has taken to the tall timber.

"Let us bear in mind that we must revise our rules of thought and action before this devilish depression, still an obsession, will depart."

Both government and business, as I see it, need to modify their attitude and action. The government cannot hope to restore prosperity until they restore among business men faith that industry will be accorded reasonable opportunity to thrive.

Men of affairs must adopt a sympathetic, liberal, farseeing attitude towards social legislation. The old order cannot possibly be restored. Under-dogs must be treated with greater consideration.

Much less has been heard in recent months regarding the activities of brain trusters. If, as seems evident, President Roosevelt has learned from experience to doubt their infallibility, what a step towards reviving confidence and employment he could take by enrolling an unofficial advisory cabinet composed of America's ablest men of affairs—and conferring seriously with them before instituting further far-reaching economic experiments.

Since America's material wellbeing depends so greatly upon restoring business and industrial health, surely it would be logical for the nation's chief executive to take counsel with the most capable upbuilders of business and industry.

I learn authoritatively that absolutely nothing concrete has taken shape in merging various automobile companies. Feelers have been put forth; nothing definite has resulted.

If, by and by, anything actually develops, Auburn is likely to be the prime mover. Its heads, Messrs Cord, Manning, Faulkner, all in the prime of life, are dynamically aggressive.

Judging from letters received by this column, the American Liberty League will encounter little difficulty in enrolling a large, representative membership.

So much political significance has been attached by the newspapers to the new organization that business leaders are hesitating to voice publicly their promised wholehearted endorsement.

Future lists of names of those associated with the movement will contain more business than political figures.

PRICES DRIFT IN A QUIET MARKET

New York, Aug 28—The stock market was a dull affair today with prices showing a tendency to continue to drift lower. Trading was listless and indicated that the majority of traders were waiting for fresh incentives before reentering the market on either side.

Profit-taking persisted in the railroad shares where New York Central, Southern Railway, Atchison and several others lost from reactions to a point.

GOLD MINERS WEAK

The gold mining shares were another weakspot today with United States Smelting, Alaska Juneau and Cerro de Pasco dipping on further pressure resulting from the strength in the dollar.

Utilities remained quiet and steady around their previous closing [illegible]. Bethlehem and other industrials, however, resumed their downtrend and sagged fractionally under yesterday's finals.

In the commodity markets wheat was highly reactionary in sympathy with foreign markets, while cotton was steady.

CREDIT EXPANSION SEEN

Labor unrest, particularly the threatened textile strike and its widening scope, continued to cast a shadow over fall prospects for business [illegible].

Some comfort was drawn from further signs of a trend toward credit expansion.

Statement by Administration authorities that banks were showing more willingness to lend money found confirmation in the weekly Federal Reserve member bank condition statement. "All other," or commercial loans increased $12,000,000, the fifth consecutive weekly gain.

Loans on securities continued to decline, dropping $23,000,000, while investment in securities other than U. S. government obligations increased $13,000,000.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

Whitney & Elwell—While it is probable that improvement in business this Autumn will not be of sufficient magnitude to be much of a factor in favor of higher stock prices, we expect a rising trend in the market over a period of months, owing to persistent expectations of further inflation.

Hornblower & Weeks—Unless the movement into new high ground last week is going to prove another false start, then the market, in order to maintain its upward direction, should again be in a position to resume the advance by mid-week at the latest.

Josephthal & Co.—The stock market gave a rather impressive performance in going into new high territory on the recovery last week and because of this we would not lay too much stress on yesterday's declines, although it would be necessary to revise one's opinion if the weakness continued today and if the market became more active on the downside.

Pennsylvania Gross Is Lower

July was the first month this year that Pennsylvania Railroad reported gross lower than 1933. This was foreshadowed by carloading which turned downward the week ended June 23 and have shown decreases since then without interruption, with percentage of decrease widening until it reached 18.8 per cent the week ended Aug. 18. Net railway operating income in July was also below a year ago, and was the second consecutive month to show a drop in net from 1933.

Gross in July of $28,985,514 compared with $31,348,280 in June, decrease $2,362,766, and was the lowest for any month since April, when it was $[illegible]. Net railway operating income for July was $4,411,[illegible] against $6,256,127 in June, decrease $1,84[illegible]. It was the smallest net of any month since February, when it was $4,098,422.

Dollar Higher in Paris Close

Paris, Aug 28 (AP)—The United State dollar gained 1½ centimes today closing at 15 francs (6.666 cents to the franc), as compared with the overnight rate of 14.985 francs (6.67 cents). The opening today was at 14.98 francs (6.678 cents).

Modern Methods Prove Boon to Commerce

The modern method of marketing commodities through the cash and future contract departments of the exchanges, proves itself a boon to commerce every business day of the year.

Owners of real estate and other tangible property have no more than a general idea of what their goods will bring unless there is a market on which it is traded.

Not so with the grain grower, the processor, the consumer and every other division of the grain industry. Whether or not the price of wheat is too low or too dear, depending upon the point of view, that price is available to the public at any moment, through the established markets.

"The modern system (of commodity marketing) facilitates legitimate trade; the ancient system retarded it," comments Walter Parker, the New Orleans economist, some time ago.

"In the modern market," said the southern authority, "the future hedge, which is a bona fide and enforceable sale in advance of delivery, enables the merchant to buy the farmers' product, no matter whether the price be high or low, at the full market price of the day, pay cash for it, store it until some consumer is ready to purchase the particular grades, borrow practically the value of the commodity from the banks, avoid speculation risk of price changes, and rest reasonably assured that, in time, his transaction will work out with a legitimate profit to him."

What he wrote specifically of cotton applies with equal accuracy to grain and its marketing.

"Under the modern system," Mr. Parker continued, "any merchant in good standing, even though his cash capital be limited, can engage in the business of buying the farmers' cotton, assorting it into round lots, and selling it to spinners and other consumers, simply and solely because future trading enables him to reduce the speculative risk to a minimum.

"Formerly, only the merchants with relatively large capital could engage in such a business, and even then his risks were excessive.

"It follows that competition in buying cotton is far keener in modern times than formerly, and that the margin of profit required by the middle man is much less than it was in the days before future trading . . .

"This is so because the future market supplies a means through which those who produce, merchandise and consume may shift the speculative risk of price changes from themselves to others, often speculators, who, in the hope of gain, are willing to shoulder that risk."

Markets that are kept broad and competitive, and free of restrictions best serve the interests of producers, according to the world's leading economists.

More Banks Accept Housing Plan

The 10th list of banks who have accepted the contract of insurance under the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration was made public, showing that the total now is 3956 institutions with aggregate resources of $26,807,809,000, serving a population of 115,110,325 persons.

Studebaker Report Given

Report of receivers of Studebaker Corporation and Rockne Motors Corporation and principal subsidiaries, excluding White Motor Company, for quarter ended June 30, 1934, shows profit of $32,306, after repairs and replacements and depreciation of $24,473, but excluding depreciation of manufacturing plants and properties. This compares with loss of $329,633 in first quarter this year and a profit of $187,493 in the June quarter of 1933.

For six months ended June 30, 1934, the loss from operations on the above basis was $297,327. Depreciation of manufacturing plants and property is not being taken during the receivership, but profit is after provision for other depreciation.

Tannery Employment Less

Massachusetts Leather Manufacturers' Association figures show tannery employment about 1700 less this August than for August, 1933, the figures being for 40 tanneries, which had about 7000 at work a year ago.

There are about 60 other tanneries in Massachusetts, some large, some small.

BOND PRICES ARE LOWER

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 28—The bond market moved irregularly lower again today as considerable profit taking persisted in the second grade rails.

St. Paul adjustments lost ¼ at 9¾, the 5s of 1975 ¾ at 31. Chicago & North Western convertible 4¾s another trading favorite sold down ¼ to 29¼. New Haven liens were easier with the 4s of 1957 off 1 at 40.

German loans were somewhat steadier today with the Dawes Loan 7s unchanged at 40.

High grades of all type maintained a generally firm tone. Pennsylvania 6s were off ⅛ at 109½, but Union Oil of California 5s were unchanged at 103, and Pennsylvania Power & Light 4½s of 1981 were up ⅛ at 97⅛.

MAKE CHANGE IN CORD GROUP

Chicago, Aug 28—Considerable significance is attached here to announcement made today by L. B. Manning, executive vice-president of Cord Corporation, that Roy H. Faulkner has been appointed president of Auburn Automobile Company, effective at once.

Auburn's new president, Faulkner, is a widely known automobile executive, who was formerly associated with Auburn Automobile Company from 1923 to 1931 as sales manager, vice-president and president, successively. He is looked upon as one of the most dynamic automobile executives in the industry.

W. H. Beal, who has risen from the ranks in the Cord organization, has been promoted to vice-president of Cord Corporation, as Manning's assistant, with offices and headquarters in Chicago.

H. T. Ames, president of Duesenberg, Inc., of Indianapolis, has also been appointed vice-president of Auburn Automobile Company.

Letter to Kelly Stockholders

The stockholders' protective committee for Kelly-Springfield Tire Company has sent a new letter to stockholders soliciting proxies to elect a new board of directors to remove Edmund S. Burke, president, and some of his associates from their present positions and to bring new officers into the company.

The committee charges that the cause for the losses incurred by Kelly-Springfield in 1933 and 1934 is "mismanagement."

Bar Gold Lower

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—Bar gold declined 2½ pence to 139s 1½d. (U. S. equivalent $35.17 on basis of sterling opening at $5.05⅛).

'When Issued' Privileges Granted

On request of United Aircraft & Transport Corp the Committee on Stock List of the New York Stock Exchange has granted "when issued" trading privileges to the capital stock of the three new companies as follows:

United Aircraft Corp., 2,203,320 shares; United Airlines Transport Corp., 1,101,660 v. t. c's; Boeing Airplane Co., 550,830 shares.

This trading will begin as soon as registration of the securities under provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 has become effective and will continue until stock of the new companies is issued. The three classes of securities have been authorized for listing on official notice of issuance.

PRICES LOWER IN CURB MART

By International News Service

New York, Aug 28—The curb market continued to drop back in early dealings today, as further disappointed selling following yesterday's setback, brought renewed declines into the leaders.

Aluminum was again under pressure in the specialties, sagging a point to 58½. General Tire and Rubber [illegible] fractional losses were sustained in Swift and A. O. Smith.

BANK STOCKS UP DURING WEEK

New York City bank stocks registered a firmer tone during the past week, and fair sized gains were recorded in some issues. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, totaled $1,426,069,000 on August 25, as compared with $1,4[illegible] at the close of the previous week, a [illegible] of $17,2[illegible] or 1.2 per cent.

Many Chances to Phenagle at Our Horse Tracks

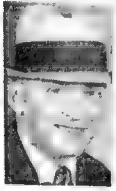
By AUSTEN LAKE

WELL, LET US CONCEDE THAT RACE stewards are honest folk; sometimes stupid, but inherently regular, sober, and conscientious. Yet you who lay your hard won dollars on a horse, whether at Rockingham, Narragansett or elsewhere, consider how many intermediary chances at skullduggery and open thievery there are before you get a virtuous race from start to finish.



Austen Lake

The jockeys, the little monkey men, may connive—as they often do. The trainers and gypsy owners may conspire, with or without benefit of drugs. And the ground crew which handle the horses at the post are in a lovely position to phenagle.

I have no wish to slur honest, industrious men. But I notice that Willis Sharpe Kilmer, the New York and Virginia breeder, who runs the Fairfield Stables, is one owner who always notifies race starters not to allow their ground helpers touch one of his horses under pain of withdrawal.

THERE WAS THE QUAINT CASE of "Hold on Jimmy," head ground man with Starter Jake Holtman, well known in the Middle West. Once Jimmy fixed his steel grip on the chin strap, bit ring, ears, mane, tail or curcingle, the horse was mained.

He needed no lip rope, as they call those three foot lengths of clothesline that are looped over a nag's muzzle to wangle him into line.

Just the clamp of his calloused palms and vise-like fingers was enough. Strong men among the bettors paled and went to tearing up their betting stubs when they heard Starter Holtman bawl, "Hey, Jimmy, catch a holta that hoss."

Because that horse was sure to be looking at the rumps of the other beasts when the barrier was lifted.

I don't suggest that any ground worker at the barrier ever sponges or otherwise tempers with a horse. I merely say, human nature being what it is in professional sport, and opportunity being plentiful, the chances are plentifully there between the moment the horses leave the stables to the moment they nuzzle the finish line.

But I also believe this! That if, with indisputable evidence, a horse race were advertised beforehand as being fixed, the public would rush, mob-style, to plank down their dollars, each individual trusting that he might, by some stroke of luck, pick the smart animal.

GLENN WARNER, NOW COACHING AT Temple University, is recognized as a super-expert on football. And Bill Brown, of the New York Boxing Commission is held as a superior thinker on boxing matters.

Yet the outstanding pre-match "bulls" of 1934 were pulled by these two gentlemen in their respective fields, Warner saying, before the Columbia-Stanford game at the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day, "It is cruelty and a crime to put such a second rate team as Columbia against such a steamroller at Stanford." He, of course, had to eat that opinion

And then, before the Carnera-Baer heavyweight fight, Brown remarked that Baer would be slaughtered by the Italian giant, because Max had made a farce of his conditioning and could not hope to give a convincing show. And he, too, ate that one.

Thus, at the start of the year, almost every baseball critic went down, chain and anchor, on the idea that Washington would breeze into a repeat pennant victory. What price experts?

"SCHOOLBOY" ROWE, WHO HAS WON 16 straight victories for Detroit, has a pair of hands that look like a bunch of bananas, enormous and broad. He can almost span two octaves on a piano keyboard. Yet his are not the largest pair of mitts in the major leagues.

Biggest belong to Burgess Whitehead, second baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals, who can stuff baseballs between the spaces of his fingers and still manage to pick up a canteloupe.

Smallest hands are probably those of Rick Ferrell, Red Sox catcher, who has the mitts of a dainty lady.

NO. 1 OPTIMIST IN SPORT TODAY is Max Schmeling, who broadcasts from Germany that he is now on the trail of Max Baer, after having spanked down blond Walter Neusel in Hamburg, Sunday.

The sight of Schmeling, arms limp, chin lolling on his chest and hanging, semi-conscious on the ropes with his back turned as Baer crouched to deliver the lethal wallop, is one of the horrific moments in the life of any sport writer who was present last summer at the Long Island Bowl.

Schmeling himself said he was grateful to Referee Art Donovan for stepping in and smothering Baer's blow to halt the match, because, otherwise, it might have spelled tragedy.

And now he is "on the trail" of, not only the same man, but a repetition of the same potential tragedy.

QUESTION FREQUENTLY ARISES, "Suppose I follow the race tips of the country's leading handicappers. Would I win money?"

Answer to that is in the grand summary which Turf and Sport Digest, horse publication, makes this month. If you had played a two dollar flat bet on choices of the most successful handicapper (Hermis) among the country's best known 15, you would only have lost $186.76 for the last month.

None of the "big shot" handicappers show a profit over the August period, which is, it seems, the normal state of affairs.

THE COST OF DEFENDING THE AMERICA'S CUP will run close to $1,500,000, not including the original building cost of any of the three class J sloops, Weetamoe, Yankee or Rainbow. Resale value of these boats is very low

And although the J. P. Morgan syndicate paid $800,000 to build Weetamoe in 1930, she was turned over to Frederick H. Prince for the reputed price of $50,000.

Every little gadget that goes into the boats costs a small fortune. Prince paid $40,000 for a new mast, and the rest of her gear mounted proportionately, new booms, sails and whatnot.

Yankee, Rainbow Meet in Second Sea Duel

Newport, R. I., Aug. 28—One down to the Rainbow final trials to determine the America's Cup defender, Yankee was to engage the New York craft in the second race this afternoon off Brenton's Reef.

With a victory practically assuring her of the defendership, Yankee [illegible] was conducted in light air, ill-suited to the Boston contender.

Rainbow won easily after Skipper Harold S. Vanderbilt maneuvered her over the start 40 seconds ahead of the Boston boat. Yankee spent the rest of the afternoon trying to catch up. In the light breeze, this was well-nigh impossible except with the aid of a few [illegible]

Johnson, A. L. Record Co-Holder, Rooting for Rowe to Break It

By Joe Cashman

[illegible]

"Rowe's a nice boy and a fine pitcher. I wish him the best of luck in his effort to add to his victory string," says Walter Perry Johnson, manager of the Cleveland Indians, and generally recognized as the greatest hurler the junior circuit has ever produced.

It was back in 1912 that "Big Barney," as he is affectionately known in baseball circles, ripped off 16 triumphs in a row. Later that season Joe Wood of the Red Sox duplicated the feat. Lefty Grove came along to share the [illegible] three years ago.

"I don't think I knew I was on my way to a record, until I read I had set one," he relates. "I couldn't tell you now what the previous mark was. Those things never interested me. I was concerned only in winning the game I was pitching."

[illegible]

WHY HE LIKES ROWE

"Schoolboy pitched against the Indians the day before I was stricken with pleurisy," he recalls. "We hit him quite hard all the way and had the tying and winning runs on the sacks with only one gone. He pulled out of the hole by fanning Hale and Trosky, both of whom were very hot with the stick at the time. Ability to bear down in the pinches in that fashion is an unmistakable sign of greatness in a pitcher."

Colonel and His Frans

Not the Misanthrope Folks Think—Likes Mort Mahoney | Jack Campbell, Too, a Buddy—and Ames and Goldman

By Dave Egan

Narragansett Park, Aug. 28—"Dear Mr. Egan," a fellow writes, "you don't seem to like much of anything around the Narragansett track, the most beautiful horse track in the East.

"You don't like Steward Cook, you don't like J. D. Mikel, who has more horses there than any other owner. Is there anybody or anything you do like around these parts?"

Yes, my friend, there are many bodies and many things I like around these here now parts.

I like:

(1) Racing Secretary Jack Campbell, even though he was born in Huey Long's state. He was born in Concordia Parish, where, according to his own words, "it takes two alligators to live one summer." Has made the round trip from rags to riches several times without losing his sunny disposition.

Started at City Park, N'Awlyans, an outlaw track, but has since reformed. Has been everything at a race track except starter and stable boy. Was secretary at Churchill Downs when Exterminator won the derby.

(2) Steward S. C. Nuckols. Never met the gentleman, but Vincent Treanor, one of the great stewards in the land, sends word from New York that I must like him. So I do.

(3) Bobby Goldman, minister without portfolio to Will-yum Ames in the publicity department. Because, when the colonel first came to Boston, 17 years ago, and did not know where the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets was, Bobby steered him right. And has been steering him right since.

(4) Will-yum Ames himself, because he has mixed lean days with fat ones without losing his balance or sense of proportion. Born in jolly old Lunnon, almost next door to Jimmy Johnston, the boy bandit, but a rabid citizen of the United States with a husky son who is still more rabid.

Billy can tear up a pack of playing cards with his bare hands. Has strongest hands on track from tearing up tickets on the wrong winners.

(4) Mortimer Mahoney, director of the totalisator. Because nobody can wipe off the smile that habitually adorns the face of this Irishman who was born in New York.

By and large, Mort Mahoney is the most popular and well-liked figure at this track. And if you doubt it, you should have been at the testimonial dinner that was given him at the Hotel Biltmore last night.

(5) Carl Hanford, brother of Buddy, Frankie Maschek, Frankie Munden, Sonny Workman, Smoky Saunders, Earl Steffen, Earl Porter, and the other jockeys who are always out there trying to win.

(6) Sheldon Fairbanks. Newspaperman. City editor of a Detroit paper when he was 22. A roamer and an adventurer, in the better sense of the word. Promoter of the first radio show and the first aeroplane show ever held in this country.

Brought Tom Thumb golf courses to New England, and then to Europe. Knew nothing about horses, so bought string of them and made himself money. Always shooting with his horses.

None Better Than Wiswell and O'Hara

(7) Judge Pat Horgan. Just because he's "a heluva guy." And besides, an Egan must go for that name.

(8) George Wiswell, whose firm handles the advertising for the track. He made the Crosscup-Pishon Post A. L. boxing shows stick-outs in the old days, and, though he was given the leg, he never lost his head.

(9) Walter O'Hara, the man who made this track possible. Because he's broadminded enough to realise that a newspaperman sometimes has to take slaps at certain things because of a public duty which he must perform.

Because he has plenty of guts. He'd rather have men say that nasty little word than use the expression, "intestinal fortitude."

(10) Jack Rutkin and Don Fowler, the newsboys who sell the American here. They'll split a two dollar bet when the money is short, and a $50 bet when they're in the dough. They travel from track to track, sell papers, and bet on the noble beasties.

So there, mister, there are some of those whom the old colonel likes.

WAX FAVORITE IN OPENER AT PAWTUCKET

in her last outing. It just looks like a question of a hustling ride.

FIRST RACE

Wax, Palasa, Polly Plum

WAX'S recent races would indicate that he has gone back in the betting, but I'm forced to give him one more chance. If he can't hold this poor lot safe, then I'll have to give him up. PALASA was only beaten three parts of a length by Prosecutor in her last outing. POLLY PLUM has a high turn of foot and may hold on long enough to snare the minor award.

SECOND RACE

Moane Keala, Cantersine, Playing On

MOANE KEALA drubbed practically this same lot in her last outing. With little change in the weight arrangements, she should have little trouble in duplicating the trick. CANTERSINE placed to the top one in his last and looks next best in this affair. PLAYING ON should hold the remaining starters safe.

THIRD RACE

Royal Dutchess, Cooney, Hot Griddle

ROYAL DUCHESS will have COONEY to drub in this affair. The latter was unable to cope with the top one in their last meeting, after getting a thorough going over during the early stages. With clear sailing in this affair, she may prove the more troublesome of the contenders. HOT GRIDDLE has been showing marked improvement from time to time and may share in the spoils.

FOURTH RACE

Knight of Old, Panorama, Starogan

KNIGHT OF OLD strikes me as holding a decided edge in this affair. A repetition of any one of his good efforts over this course should be sufficient to turn the trick. PANORAMA has a smattering of class but her performances indicate that her best races are over a route. However, she may be along in time to save the place. STAROGAN has been racing fairly well with $2000 top and bottom platers and shapes up well for the short end of the spoils.

FIFTH RACE

Burning Up, Curacao, Zorana

I find it impossible to post BURNING UP's last race in this affair. The J. D. Mikel colorbearer raced a mile and one-sixteenth in track record time last out to Drub Bylona, Redress, and that sort of running should hold this ordinary lot safe. CURACAO is an old fellow with class. On best form, he would stand a royal chance of winning the whole affair.

SIXTH RACE

Pernickety, How High, Lawless Lady

PERNICKETY has drawn an outside post position and should be clear of early interference. Last out, she placed to Mynah over this same distance. HOW HIGH displayed considerable improvement in his last race and may be up to a good effort. LAWLESS LADY is a hard running mare and will be dangerous if able to keep up in the early running.

SEVENTH RACE

Gallic, Prince Abbott, Rock Point

GALLIC is capable of taking the top and making every pole of this affair a winning one. The Galetan miss was a bit over her head last out and that effort may be disregarded. PRINCE ABBOT was never better and looks like the more dangerous of the contenders. ROCK POINT placed to Lofty Lady last out and is not out of it by any means.

$20,000 Paid for First American Cup Winner

Britain challenges the United States, beginning Sept. 15, when T. O. Sopwith's yacht Endeavour opens a series of races off Newport, R. I., with a defender yet to be chosen, for the historic America's Cup. The Boston owned and sailed Yankee is the probable U. S. Cup defender. The races are to be sailed until one yacht wins four races and the series. The following article is one of a colorful series describing highlights of the 84 years of the Cup's existence.

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 28—Young George Steers, designer of several of the fastest yachts of the New York Yacht Club fleet, was given an order by six members of the N. Y. Y. C. on November 15, 1850, to build the America, with which they planned to invade British waters at the invitation of English businessmen.

The schooner was contracted for at a delivery price of $30,000, but owing to two delays in the completion of the work the price was reduced to $20,000.

The America was launched on May 3, 1851, and sailed from New York on June 21 with 13 persons aboard. The schooner made the passage to Havre, France, in 17½ days, becoming the first yacht to cross the Atlantic.

STOPPED AT FRENCH PORT

The French port was chosen as the first stopping point to prevent the English getting a chance to study the yacht while she was being refitted. However, the America had a brush with a fast cutter on the trip across the channel and her speed was no longer a secret.

Several challenges for match races were posted by John C. Stevens, then commodore of the N. Y. Y. C. along with side bets of 10,000 guineas and 10,000 pounds but they were rejected. Finally the America was entered in the royal yacht squadron regatta, competing with 14 yachts ranging in size from 47 to 392 tons, with the America weighing 170 tons.

The America sailed the 53 nautical miles of the regatta's feature race in 10 hours, 37 minutes, finishing 18 minutes ahead of Aurora the smallest boat in the fleet.

BEAT KING'S YACHT

The victory carried with it the Squadron Cup, which later became known as "The America's Cup," symbol of supremacy in international yachting.

One of the legends told in connection with the race concerned Queen Victoria of England. When apprised the America had won, the Queen turned to the quartermaster and inquired:

"Who finished second?"

"Ah, Your Majesty," came the reply, "there was no second."

Mat Results

Montreal — Strangler Lewis, 210, Glendale, Cal., threw Yvon Robert, 218, Montreal, in one hour, three minutes.

Portland, Me.—Graham Stockton, 175, Saskatchewan, took two straight falls from Archie Campbell, 174, Montreal; first with "squirrel hop" in 22:06, second with backfall in 10:19. Chuck Montana, 170, Detroit, and Paddy Mack, 171, Philadelphia, thrown out of ring by Referee Al Rodrigues, Quincy, Mass., after the two had torn his shirt to shreds.

Revere—Fred Bruno, New York, defeated Drop Kick Murphy, Malden, best two in three falls. Murphy took first fall in 18:31 with drop kick; Bruno squared matters in 10.52 with body press, then was awarded decision when Murphy, trying to execute flying tackle, landed on floor outside ring and was unable to continue.

Chicago—Rapt Garibaldi, St. Louis, defeated Jack Brown, Shreveport, La. (Brown disqualified.)

Altrock Will Come For "Rabbit" Day

The committee in charge of arrangements for the celebration of "Maranville Day" on Sept. 2, in honor of Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, injured Boston Braves' infielder, received word today from Nick Altrock, baseball's funny man, that he would be on hand to pay his tribute to the "Peter Pan" of baseball.

Scores Fifth Ace

Montreal, Aug. 28 (AP)—Golfers attention!

Jacques Archambault yawned a bit ostentatiously when his tee shot on the 158-yard seventh hole of the Laval-Sur-Le-Lac layout yesterday rolled into the cup for an ace. It was his fifth hole in one.

COOK-COOS

by Ted Cook REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A warning issued by the U. S. Public Health Service says people must be careful not to swallow safety pins, needles, buttons, nails, bolts, coins or jewelry.

Under the Republican administration a person was free to live his own life.

There are times when a fellow has to munch a safety pin or starve.

This night take my paragon window shopping and never have I seen the poor wretch stand so long with nose to glass as she covet pretties, and when she yammer her heart's desire I did but stroke my nose and scratch my chin, which, methinks, is better than saying "aye" for "nay" e'ry time she seek for to bleed my purse.

'Twas a Blue Monday for Tax Title Sharks

MONDAY was very disappointing for some of the foulest smelling fish that ever managed to worm their way into City Hall—the tax title sharks.

In the past this gentry has been in the habit of bidding in delinquent tax titles without digging up so much as a penny. At Monday's sale—to their consternation—they found Collector John F. Doherty demanding a 50 per cent deposit on every transaction.

Legitimate purchasers of tax titles had no objection to the demand. They usually pay 100 per cent anyway. But the racketeers howled, then made sour faces and refrained from bidding for the most part when they found that they had howled in vain.

It was just to stop the "skin game" of these parasites that Mr. Doherty slapped on the 50 per cent deposit demand. He had planned to make it 100 per cent, but decided half of that would serve the purpose. It did.

Tax title sharks have been in the habit of bidding in delinquent claims and then making outrageous demands on the unfortunate property owners. Many badgered home owners have paid these exorbitant and usurious charges simply because they did not know that the law entitled them to redeem their property within two years—and at no excessive cost.

THE best proof that these tax sharks are not at all interested in the legitimate acquisition of property is the fact that in almost all cases in which they are unable to collect from the owners, they allow the property to revert to the city.

When the city bids in a title—to preserve its equity—it makes a charge of $7 or $8 plus interest at 8 per cent when the owner comes to redeem it. The sharks usually collect the 8 per cent, plus a charge of around $25.

Various efforts have been made in the past to stamp out this vicious form of speculation. None was very successful.

It is to be hoped that the plan inaugurated by Mr. Doherty will be continued. It promises to reduce the evil, if not eliminate it.

Are Statistics Dull?

In the face of figures, the "boys" of the county rings always fervently pray that the voters will consider statistics dull reading and skip them for something a bit more lively.

But it is hard to find anything more lively than the rate at which the cost of county government has increased in Massachusetts in the last 20 years.

Although the counties in this state carried virtually none of the burden of welfare expenses that came with the depression, we will "lean over backwards" and cite only figures prior to 1926.

In the 14 years from 1912 to 1926, the cost of county government in Massachusetts increased 190 per cent! Allowing for the increase in population, we still have a per capita increase of 120.4 per cent!

These are no estimates of our own, but the statistics compiled by the Commonwealth. How can the county ring "boys" explain them in the face of the fact that they undertook no new functions during those years?

There was no comparable increase in the number of suits filed in county courts or in the population of county jails and reform schools and sanitaria. Where did the money go?

Can there be a more convincing argument for the need of county reform?

The Blind and Deaf

One more testimonial of the nation's high regard for New England institutions comes from Omaha, Nebraska. A seven-year-old girl from that city—blind and deaf—is to be sent to the Perkins Institution in Watertown.

Had she been only blind, or only deaf, schools in her own state would have undertaken her schooling. As she is, her case is too much for them.

But similar cases in the future will not be. This is because the Watertown school has not only agreed to accept the little girl as a pupil, but has also suggested that a teacher accompany her. This woman will learn the latest methods of teaching the blind and the deaf and take them back to Nebraska.

And there will be no charge for teaching the teacher.

New Excursion Ways

The fashions change, even as to excursion routes. Back in the days when William Dean Howells, "Dean of American Literature," was over in Cambridge, editing the Atlantic Monthly, the main excursion open for Boston week-enders was a steamboat trip to Nantasket.

The advent of the automobile opened up practically the whole United States to tourists. And even on the waters a transformation took place.

Today the Thurlows and others are running daily trips to Cape Cod and Provincetown. All of the great Massachusetts Bay is open to "trippers."

The big steamships ply to New York and other ports, and there's more activity on the whole than has been seen since things fell down in historic 1929.

Does Own Detecting

A Beachmont man, forced to patronize the railroad when his automobile was stolen, looked out of the train window and saw his car racing along the Lynnway.

He decided to do his own detecting. Leaving the train at Revere Street station, he began looking through the streets of Revere, found it and caused the arrest of the man alleged to have taken it.

All this happened within an hour. If all wrongdoing cases were cleaned up as quickly as this, there'd be no material for the fiction of such as Edgar Wallace, J. B. Fletcher and S. S. Van Dyne.

Tires Are Still Cheap

This week's advance in the prices of tires affects nearly everyone, since practically all of us are motorists at least a part of the year.

The consoling fact regarding the rise is that tires are still very cheap. It is unlikely that we will ever again see the cost schedules revived which prevailed in the early days of motordom.

The perfecting of tires has kept pace with increased demand and production. Our tire manufacturers, indeed, have all along set a splendid example for other industries.

Russo-Jap Situation Shows Futility of Kellogg Pact

By James T. Williams, Jr.

In spite of the angry diplomatic exchanges now going on between Russia and Japan over the Chinese Eastern Railway, advices to Washington from its own observers in Russia and Japan agree that there is not much likelihood of war in the Far East before next year.

One reason for this view is based upon the knowledge that the extensive program for modernizing of the Japanese army which is now being carried out will not be completed until 1935. And unless Russia should force the issue, the probability seems to be that Japan would prefer to wait until her army is completely modernized before she clashes with her old enemy on the continent of Asia.

RUSSIANS STRENGTHEN

Russia in the meantime is increasing her armaments and striving to strengthen her diplomatic position with other powers, encouraged by the resumption of relations with the United States.

According to a statement covering the period from January 1 to August 6, 1934, by M. Rudi, general manager of the Soviet Manchukuo Railway board, the following "incidents" are alleged to have disturbed the peace along the route of the Chinese Eastern Railway:

"Sixteen trains wrecked by 'planned' damage to the tracks; ninety-one armed raids on railway stations and barracks; one hundred and sixteen railway employes arrested or kidnaped; nine bridges damaged; forty-six murders, including nine of railway agents; one hundred and two persons injured, including eighty-three railway agents; forty-two robberies of railway employes; twenty-two cases of arson affecting railway property; twenty-one locomotives and two hundred and seven coaches damaged; total physical losses of three hundred thousand gold rubles apart from loss of revenue."

MOULDING WORLD OPINIONS

Japan's list of grievances has yet to be broadcast. It is not surprising that freight traffic over this railroad has dropped to a minimum since China's right to half a share in the management was taken over by the government of "Manchukuo."

By vigorously protesting alleged lawless acts on the part of Japan along the line of the railway in dispute Russia hopes to mobilize world opinion against Japan and assure herself a free hand when she finally decides or is forced to resort to the sword to achieve her purposes.

Last spring when negotiations regarding the railway were revived there appeared to be good prospects that the dispute could be peaceably adjusted. When these negotiations became deadlocked early in August the governments had come within ten million yen of agreeing to the purchase price. Russia had come down in her price from 620,000,000 yen to 160,000,000 yen and the Japanese offer for the railway had been increased from 50,000,000 to 150,000,000 million yen.

When Japan made this offer it was clearly intimated that it was final. It was rejected by Russia on August 13 and on the same day began the series of arrests of Russian subjects by the police of the Manchukuo government, charged with plotting to assassinate officials of the Japanese and Manchukuo governments that has so aroused the Russian government in the last few days.

KILLING PACT FUTILE

In this Far Eastern dispute the United States has no direct interest. It is a dispute that may lead to war. The fact that it has finally provoked an angry exchange of notes between Russia and Japan proves once more how futile the League of Nations and the Kellogg-Briand Treaty are when two great nations engage in a quarrel of this kind.

As long as the dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway continues to bedevil the relations of Russia and Japan it is obviously absurd to expect that these two governments will consent to reduce or limit armaments or pay any attention to the mandates of the League of Nations.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

SHOULD MOTHERS BE CRITICIZED?

"Why," says she, "do you so often criticize mothers? You say you're a mother yourself, but I don't believe it; for no real mother would dream of criticizing motherhood. Every woman who has ever had a child knows that mother love is the most beautiful and sacred thing on earth, and that any mother would gladly give her life for her child."

Elsie Robinson

Why do I criticize mothers? Because people like you make remarks like that, lady. And they've made them so often, and for so long, that the world has come to believe them. With the result that Mother Worship has become a vicious racket and widespread menace.

There is, indeed, no nobler thing on earth than the love of a fine and intelligent mother. But there are several things just as noble—amongst them the love of a fine and intelligent father. And the mere fact that a female has given birth to a child is no guarantee that she, herself, is noble or fine or even loving.

BIRTH ORDEAL

The birth ordeal in itself is as purely a physical process as any of our bodily functions. There is nothing in that ordeal that can possibly transform a stupid woman into a bright and well-informed one; a selfish woman into an unselfish one; a coarse, lazy, unreliable trollop into a creature of beauty and light.

Yet nine out of 10 otherwise sensible citizens actually believe that this miracle happens—and blaze with righteous indignation if you insist that it doesn't and can't.

We view, with proper contempt, the silly, selfish acts of a worthless young woman. Yet let that woman become a mother and we immediately enshrine her and grant her extraordinary privileges and exemptions. All of which is malicious tommy-rot.

It would be as idiotic to confer the degrees of lawyer, doctor or civil engineer upon a young man because he'd endured a day of colic, as to endow a young woman with the combined status of philosopher and saint merely because she has gone through the birth travail.

Nor could any practice be more maudlin or malicious than our popular custom of raving about the heroism of young women because they have "gone down into the valley of the shadow of death to give life to their little ones." The simple fact is that in nine cases out of 10 motherhood is at first most unwelcome, however much the baby may be adored thereafter. And instead of being Voluntary Heroines most Mamas are extremely Mad Martyrs.

Also, every really honest and loving mother knows that, no matter how great her suffering, the joy of motherhood is worth all it costs—and to such a mother a child is always a privilege, never a sacrifice.

SILLY THEORY

Equally silly and dangerous is the theory that any mother would give her life for her child. The plain fact—of which we all see abundant proof daily—is that many mothers won't even sacrifice their temporary comfort for a child, much less give their lives for it.

Moreover, the fact that a mother would die bravely for her child is no proof that she will live sensibly for it. Intelligent and successful motherhood, like any other job, requires hard study. No amount of "mother instinct" (even if such a thing existed) could possible teach a young woman the physiological and psychological facts required to properly feed and train a child.

Yet, because of the sentimental attitude toward motherhood, the average young mother believes she needs no equipment save her uninstructed and uncontrolled affection.

If a plumber or a carpenter knew as little about his job as the average mother knows about hers, and went about it as sloppily, he'd be kicked out of his union pronto.

It is often said that "You have only one mother." Many a nagged and neglected child could heartily answer that one is quite enough.

Lacks Sympathy

By Winifred Black

Kate—Dear me! I mean Katherine—is going in for social work.

Nice, serious girl, Katherine; nothing brilliant about her, to be sure; nothing in the least startling. If you met Katherine walking along a winding road just at sunset, you'd never think about moonlight and roses and soft dance music.

Winifred Black

You wouldn't even think about roly-poly babies, and flowered curtains at the window, and something good simmering on the stove in a neat little kitchen.

You'd just think, "Why, there's a young woman out for a constitutional"—and that would be all, unless you wondered idly from what college she had just been graduated.

No, Katherine is not especially quick-witted, or particularly kind-hearted.

There's nothing mean, or unkind, or disagreeable about Katherine. She's just sort of cold and uninteresting. And when it comes right down to it, Katherine is uninterested in anything except her work.

And her work is going to be social work. Hasn't she learned all about it in her books?

She knows just exactly what makes girls go wrong, and why husbands leave wives, and what's the matter with the half-grown boy that makes him run away and live in the jungles with a lot of tramps, rather than to stay at home and be clean and decent with his own clean and decent father and mother and brothers and sisters—and maybe a stray cousin or a bewildered aunt thrown in for good measure.

Katherine has heard all about love at first sight—and she has her opinion of it, has Katherine.

She knows why blondes marry brunettes, and why little women always prefer tall men and little men are so very apt to adore great, tall women.

Oh, yes, Katherine has studied hard, and she stood number one in her sociology class—so, of course, she must be a social worker.

And the plain truth is that Katherine doesn't know any more about human nature—really to know about it or sympathize with it—than the average plumber knows about managing a mothers' meeting.

Katherine is conscientious, she's industrious, and she means well; but if I had a drunken husband—save the mark!—and a house full of ailing children, and the oldest boy arrested for breaking a window with a baseball, and the oldest girl—well, the neighbors beginning to talk about her—and the landlord giving me a nasty look when I met him in the hall, and the grocer saying he was sorry but he had his own bills to meet—

Well, if Katherine came to give me a social worker's visit, I'd throw a pail of cold water, or suds, or anything else I had handy, right straight at Katherine. And that would be just exactly that.

I do wonder how she ever got it into her head that she'd be a good social worker—don't you?

Words of Wise

It is much easier to be critical than to be correct.—Disraeli.

The American people may be foolish at times, but they don't like fools in an emergency.—Jay Franklin.

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

It looks as though Cleaning Day had arrived, for America.

"The New Morality," as it is amusingly called, is about to be disinfected, scrubbed off and then thrown out with the rubbish or put away in the attic with the rest of the moth-eaten curios. Sin is no longer smart or even fashionable.

Helen Rowland

It has lost all its glamour. We have been SO FED UP on it!

The only trouble seems to be that most of us have lost our moral perspective and have gotten sin and virtue so confused that we don't know which is which.

Of course, we still know vaguely that murder is immoral, and that robbery is extremely reprehensible; and we are aware that gangsters and scarlet ladies should not be glorified in novels or on the screen, but should get what is coming to them and serve as horrible examples rather than as patterns.

VILLA A "HERO"

But when Pancho Villa, the wholesale murderer who terrorized our border states, becomes a "hero" and a good old scout, we begin to wonder just how far a hero can go—and still be a "hero" these days.

Apparently, a screen hero can listen at doorways, open letters addressed to other people and read them and help themselves to the other fellow's gel, and still be highly ethical.

And the heroine of one of our most successful stage plays in recent years got tangled up emotionally with three men, so she married one of them, ran away with the other two and double-crossed all three.

This, dear hearts, is what is called "The New Morality" Personally, I prefer old-fashioned SIN with the old-fashioned villain.

A decent sort of villain, who wouldn't stoop to do anything worse than foreclose the mortgage, steal the papers or tie the gel to the railroad tracks. A villain who got hissed—and LIKED it!

MUST HAVE VILLAIN

We simply MUST have a villain or a villainess, or at least a few sinners to make a good play or a good picture. Sinners are necessary for plot and color and dramatic effects—and, above all, for contrast. With no sin for comparison, how could we recognize virtue when we saw it?

Even Shakespeare went in heavily for villains and sinners—but he did not whitewash them and glorify them. It is only when the villain becomes the "hero" of the plot and when the scarlet lady is glorified as a "modernistic heroine," that we get our ideas of virtue and vice all mixed up.

Why not let us be frank with ourselves and run true to life? No gangster is a hero—he is just a super-rotter. And no scarlet lady is a lily, no matter how cleverly she may plead "The New Morality" to prove it.

Stars and Stripes

Carter Glass has gone to England to study Bacon, which, stripped of its Shakespearean connection, is something every American senator should be able to bring home.

Turkey is going to hang her public enemy Number 1 just to let him know that he has come to the end of his rope.

"How did you enjoy the philharmonic concert, Mrs. Gotrox?"

Human Side of the News; Fellowship of Poles

By Edwin C. Hill

Captain Bob Bartlett is off to the Arctic to investigate the breeding habits of the snow goose. Admiral Dick Byrd is deep down in the Antarctic. Now and again Donald McMillan pops up in the news.

The Fellowship of the Poles is active. But one name has dropped out of sight and hearing, a name which, a bare quarter of a century ago was blazoned in tall streamers across the front pages, a name which roused the world to thrills of excitement and convulsed it with laughter.

It is Dr. Frederick A. Cook to whom I allude, the very ingenious Brooklyn gentleman who tasted the joys of fame with his subsequently disproved yarn of climbing to the peak of Mt. McKinley, and then leaped to the clouds with his amazing tale of being the first of all humans to set foot on the exact spot from which all directions are south.

COOK BUSY WRITING

He's sixty-nine now, the good doctor, and at last accounts was devoting his time to writing. His own memoirs would make first class reading. He proved that he could tell a rattling good story when he came back that time from the Far North. In the twilight of life he's a philosophical old chap, not bitter at events, taking things pretty much as they come, just trying to get along.

Robert E. Peary may have his well deserved fame. Byrd has earned his over and over again, but Dr. Cook was the only human being who ever discovered the North Pole from a hotel bedroom. In those days twenty-five years ago he was a little sturdy man, with dreamy, gray-blue eyes, a trim, fair mustache and firm, strong chin shorn of beard and with a child-like smile.

A very ordinary catalogue of man's features, but that was the most remarkable thing about Dr. Cook—his ordinariness.

The business started one day in Copenhagen, Denmark, when Cook, who had been somewhere in the North, but not within a long stride of the North Pole, turned up with the bland statement that he had planted the American flag on top of the earth.

This was startling, because Admiral Peary was somewhere up there, and word was expected from Peary almost any day. But here was this commonplace little Brooklyn doctor calmly claiming the tremendous honor and telling a story that thrilled everybody from the King of Denmark down to the beggars in the street.

And they fell for it! They wined him and they dined him. He told the Danish King's children in the royal palace all about the polar bears, the musk oxen and the sledge dogs, and about the two brave Esquimaux who had followed him on his terrible journey.

FED ON GUM-DROPS

They fed almost exclusively, he said, on gum-drops. And all at once the whole world pleaded for the honor of entertaining this Dr. Cook. He came home and New York gave him a tremendous greeting. Fifty great cities offered him their keys. Medals and cash and college degrees were bestowed upon him. He was the great man of the earth. And suddenly the bubble burst!

One morning the New York Times printed a flock of sworn affidavits that destroyed him. The fatal one was made by a retired sea captain and expert navigator named Captain August Wedel Loose. The captain swore that Cook had hired him to forge a long series of astronomical observations to convince scientists that Cook really had reached the pole.

So Wedel sat down in the Gramatan hotel in Bronxville, near New York, and manufactured the evidence. But when he tried to collect his pay, Cook couldn't be found, and finally the captain angrily exposed the hoax.

Partly in laughter, partly in anger, the world realized it has been gloriously and gorgeously fooled. The biggest hoax of the century—perhaps of all time. And yet, this writer had always had the conviction that he fooled himself most of all, that he really had the idea that he reached the Pole, or approximately there.

Sitting with him and the late Frank Ward O'Malley one night in old Shanley's restaurant, we asked him the blunt question:

"Doctor, honestly now, did you actually get to the Pole?" And his answer was—delivered with something like conviction, in all apparent sincerity: "Boys, I think so."

Once-Overs to Remember

Many will not admit their ignorance and ask enlightening information. In this way they miss opportunities to learn important facts.

You have often inferred certain knowledge of which you were ignorant, thinking that you would try later to read something on the subject.

But you did not do it.

Seeking such information was like other resolutions you have made—you put it off until too late.

What a lot of subjects you have on your list to study when "conditions are just right!"

You know you should be better informed on many different matters.

In your library are many books of reference which you intend carefully to "read some day."

Your excuse is that you must have plenty of time to digest the subject matter as you read it.
